O'Conor Announces 40% Property Tax Slash

Special Session May Be Ordered To Reduce State Taxes on Incomes

Governor Declares Huge Surplus Warrants Sharp Drops in Amounts State Must Raise

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 25 (AP)—Governor O'Conor tonight announced an eight-cent cut in the state property tax rate for 1942 and 1943, and said he might call a special legislative session to whittle the state income tax.

The reductions would cut the real and personal property taxes from twenty-two cents per $100 to fourteen cents in 1942, a forty per cent drop, and to thirteen cents in 1943 instead of twenty-one cents.

The proposed slash in income levies, however, would apply to 1941 earnings, O'Conor said.

The governor said swelling revenues, principally from corporation, liquor, and income taxes, made the reductions possible.

$8,350,000 Surplus

The state will have a treasury surplus of $8,350,000 by the close of the 1941 fiscal year Sept. 30, State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes estimated.

But this year's surplus, O'Conor said, does not itself make the tax cuts possible, for much of these funds are to be used for financing operations in 1942, according to the budget already drawn.

Instead, the tax cuts are enabled by revenues which in 1942 are expected to equal or surpass those of 1941.

Tawes estimated the 1942 surplus would be $8,500,000 if taxes were not reduced. With a working capital of $2,200,000 to be carried through into 1943, according to budget plans, this would make a surplus in 1942 of $6,300,000.

$2,000,000 Cut in Surplus

The eight-cent slash in property tax in 1942 would reduce this surplus by $2,000,000, O'Conor estimated, leaving a $4,300,000 surplus

Mrs. Roosevelt's Brother Dies in Hospital, Aged 50

G. Hall Roosevelt Succumbs to Liver Ailment at Walter Reed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP)—For the second time within a month, personal tragedy was added to the burdens of the first family today when G. Hall Roosevelt, only brother of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, died at the army's Walter Reed hospital here.

The 50-year-old engineer, banker and transport executive had been ill of a liver ailment for many months. Mrs. Roosevelt was at his bedside when death came at 5 a. m. (EST).

Because of Hall Roosevelt's extreme illness, the White House had cancelled twelve hours earlier a luncheon arranged today for the duke and duchess of Windsor. This had been planned as a simple, informal function since Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt are mourning the recent death of the president's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt.

Funeral at White House

Funeral services for Hall Roosevelt will be held in the executive mansion at 3 p. m. (EST) tomorrow. They will be conducted by Chaplain J. C. W. Linsley of Fort Myer, Va., nearby army post. Afterward, the body will be taken to Tivoli, N. Y., childhood home of Hall and Eleanor, for burial. After the service Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Hyde Park for the week-end.

Nephew of one president—Theodore Roosevelt—and brother-in-law of another, Hall Roosevelt himself had little taste for politics. He retired in 1930 the urgings of a group of Michigan Democrats that he run for governor, and the only public offices he ever held were Detroit city controller and mem-

Berlin Reports Sinking of 12 Ships In Raid on Convoy Off West Africa

U-Boats Said To Be Operating from Secret Base Which May Be French Port of Dakar or Vicinity

BERLIN, Sept. 25 (AP)—The high command announced tonight almost complete annihilation of a twelve-ship England-bound convoy off West Africa, declared that a new and secret Nazi U-boat technique had made the convoy system increasingly vulnerable and said almost 1,000,000 tons of British ships had been sunk since the start of the Russian war.

Million Tons Sunk

All but one of the ships attacked by a U-boat fleet off West Africa were sunk, a special communique said. A few hours later a high command spokesman, citing this latest attack as one example, produced the 1,000,000 ton figure to support his contention that the submarine has been developed as a weapon of offense faster than defenses against U.boats have been devised.

The convoy system, the spokesman said, is the most effective British system of defense yet devised at sea

Russians Hurl Masses Of Troops at Germans

BERLIN, Sept. 25 (AP) — The Russians are throwing "great masses" of troops against German positions on the North Central front, apparently to draw German strength away from Leningrad, dispatches from the front said tonight.

Leningrad itself was portrayed as being reduced to burning ruins and wreckage by continuous cannonade and desperate house-to-house fighting in its factory suburbs.

Waves of Red soldiers attacked German infantry which dug in yesterday on the east bank of the Dvina river some 200 miles west of Moscow and 300 miles south of Leningrad, DNB reported.

The agency said the Russians were unable to break German positions in the area. (Russian dispatches yesterday said Germans in this sector were routed in a four-day battle that cost the invaders most than 2,500 dead.)

Report Reds in Retreat

On the southern front a German armored division attacked two Soviet infantry divisions and drove them into retreat, DNB reported. But the Russians were said to have built a defense-line of trenches and machine-gun nests from the Kharkov industrial area to Crimea.

Reports Conflicting

The reports were in some respects conflicting, but all of them agreed that the bitter fight for Russia's second city had shown no sign of let-up. Admittedly there was furious hand-to-hand fighting by the defenders in the villages at the edge of the metropolis; mentioned, too, was continued defense by warships in the bay of Kronstadt near Leningrad.

The Soviet battleships October Revolution and Marat have been firing from the bay in reply to German long-range artillery and Stukas and, although both have been reported hit badly, the commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland said today: "it will not be long until the barrels of these guntowers will be silenced."

One authorized spokesman said it was his understanding that the October Revolution already was out of the fight.

Dienst said the guns of the two battleships "formed the strongest potential defense for Leningrad." It added that Kronstadt bay was sheltering the remainder of the Soviet Baltic fleet and that "more than forty Soviet U-boats are hidden in the bay."

Capture Large Factory

In the suburban fighting, one German division was reported to have taken a large factory section after reducing it house by house. In some places trenches and case-

Walsh Rules Md. Cannot Intervene In Insurance Case

Attorney General Says State Is Unable To Go into Court as Asked

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25 (AP) — Attorney General William C. Walsh said today the state had no right to intervene in court in behalf of approximately 5,000 Marylanders being sued by the liquidator of the Keystone Indemnity Exchange of Pennsylvania.

In an opinion prepared at the request of State Insurance Commissioner John B. Gontrum, Walsh termed the suits "purely private controversies between the liquidator of the Keystone Indemnity Exchange and policy holders in this state."

He added:

Walsh's Opinion

"While the insurance laws authorize you to act as receiver for insolvent Maryland insurance companies, or as ancillary receiver for similar companies in other states, and to prosecute claims against policy holders or others who may owe money to the defunct company, the law does not authorize you to intervene on behalf of policy holders who are being sued by a receiver or liquidator appointed in another state.

"Nor is the attorney general authorized to appear in any cases in which the state is not a party, or in which it has no interest."

Gontrum had asked the state law department how he could aid Maryland policy holders of the company ,which failed in 1933, and seeks to collect assessment claims totalling $611,000 from the Marylanders. The Keystone is a reciprocal company in which policy holders agree to assume all obligations

Chief of Argentina Air Force Is Removed from Office with 20 Others

Plot To Overthrow Government Charged by War Minister

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 25 (AP)—General Angel M. Zuloaga, chief of the U. S.-trained Argentine air force, was removed from his command tonight by War Minister Juan Tonazzi after twenty aviation officers had been arrested as conspirators against the state.

The 56-year-old Zuloaga submitted his resignation yesterday to express his dissatisfaction both with his subordinates whom the government charged with plotting an uprising, and with his superiors who acted against them without consulting him.

But Tonazzi chose to fire him—a few hours after returning from a good-will visit to Chile and going itno a conference with Acting President Ramon Castillo. The president has charged radical party members, Nationalists, and others were behind the plot, but has given no further details of the extent or purposes of the conspiracy.

Although shorn of his command, Zuloaga remains in active service at the disposal of the war ministry.

Maryland Facing Fires in Woods, Forester Reports

Walter J. Quick Fears Great Damage If Dry Weather Continues

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25 (AP)—Take the word of Assistant State Forester Walter J. Quick, there's plenty of trouble ahead for Maryland unless the entire state is soaked with heavy rains before the leaves spread a tinder-dry blanket through the woodlands.

Some sections of the state have had no rainfall since June. Others have had no more than scattered thundershowers.

As an example of the present conditions of the forest, quick points to the most recent large fire in Kent county, one which burned underground through the roots of trees in what is normally swamp land. Fed by sun-dried moss, the fire burned through 500 acres before brought under control early this week.

Will Open Towers Early

Quick said today that the state's fire towers might be manned a week or ten days before Oct. 15—customarily regarded as the opening of the danger season which extends until about Dec. 10. The tower near Aberdeen already has been placed in operation.

The forestry department, headed by F. W. Besley, began some time ago locating personnel and towermen now have been secured for all points except Long Hill and Burtonville, in Anne Arundel county.

A final compilation of damage, made by the department, showed the fire which swept 3,177 1-2 acres in that county last April was one of the largest in Maryland history. Although it covered less ground than the 7,000-acre Dan's Mountain blaze in Garrett county in 1930, it destroyed a record number of buildings—eleven houses, a church, ten barns and several other smaller outbuildings.

Total Damage $34,067

Total damage was estimated at $34,067, less than the Eastern Shore fire at the same time last spring which swept 2,600 acres, and caused an estimated damage of $49,410 plus another $16,000 in timber, some of which was salvaged.

Quick said, "we're not in a much better position to fight large fires than we were last April. We have no additional funds with which to purchase needed additional equipment, and it's more difficult to find manpower because it is being absorbed by national defense."

The towermen, he said, would co-operate with the army, acting as air raid observation posts in the far-flung interceptor command.

Cobina Wright, Jr., Says She Will Marry Corporal Beaudette

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 25 (AP)—Cobina Wright, Jr., of New York Society and the movies, says she is going to marry Corp. Palmer T. Beaudette, who recently spent $1,300 to charter a plane to get back to Fort Lewis after calling on her.

"I have just promised to marry him," she said. "He has agreed to let me continue with my acting. I haven't an engagement ring yet but that will have to wait until he finishes an officers' training school in Georgia. That will take three months.

"Meanwhile I'll wear the topaz ring and bracelet set he gave me on my birthday. Our birthdays are close together. We're both Leos and we'll probably claw each other to pieces, but we're going to try it."

Charles County Fair Draws Large Crowd

LA PLATA, Md., Sept. 25 (AP)—More than 2,000 school children from all parts of Charles county came to the fairgrounds here today for the grand opening of the four-day Charles County fair, Southern Maryland tobacco festival, and horse show.

The opening day crowd was swelled to more than 3,000 persons, with children accompanied by parents, school teachers and others. The day was cloudy, but there was no threat of rain and hundreds of children competed in athletic contests and games.

Earl Loveless and James L. Miller Pay Death Penalty for Poffenberger Crime

Both Executed on Gallows at State Penitentiary Early Today

BALTIMORE, Sept. 26 (AP)—Earl Loveless and James Lee Miller walked silently to the gallows tonight to pay with their lives for the slaying last Oct. 11 of Roleigh Poffenberger, Keedysville farmer.

Loveless, 22, went first. The trapdoor dropped at 12:01½ and he was pronounced dead at 12:11 a. m. Miller, followed five minutes later, the trap sprung at 12:17½, and he was pronounced dead at 12:32.

Prison guards quoted both men as saying they were "satisfied to go." Neither spoke a word on the gallows.

Fifty Witness Hangings

About fifty persons witnessed the hangings, among them Sergt. J. J. Cassidy, Sheriff Joseph D. Baker of Washington county, and Lieut. Edward J. Chapman of the Western Maryland railway police, who were principals in the breaking of the case.

One man, Robert Miller, deputy sheriff from Hagerstown, fainted during the hangings.

The prisoners, convicted of the pipe wrench slaying of the 76-year-old farmer, had been at the penitentiary death house since August 2.

Commutation Refused

Their last chance to cheat the gallows vanished when Governor O'Conor announced at 2:04 p. m. today he would not commute their death sentence to life imprisonment.

The chief executive, after studying a transcript of the testimany in the case and other documents said he "found no reason that would justify overruling" the Allegany County Circuit Court, which convicted and sentenced the men to death.

O'Conor said the defendants had been tried by separate juries which rendered unqualified verdicts of first degree murder. Three judges, including the chief judge, heard all the evidence and decided to impose the death penalty, he said.

Attorneys for Loveless and Miller, in asking for clemency, contended that the juries which convicted the men returned unqualified verdicts of first degree murder under a misconception that the defendants would be sentenced to life.

Born Turned to Religion

Both men, who were the lone occupants of the death house, turned to religion in their last hours. They were baptised yesterday morning by Chaplain B. F. Blubagh.

They were gives Bibles when they entered the penitentiary and under the Rev. Blubagh's guidance, they have read them daily. The chaplain said Miller had never been to a church service and added that Loveless once attended Sunday school irregularly, but professed no faith.

Knox in Bermuda To Inspect Bases

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Sept. 25 (AP)—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox arrived in Bermuda today to inspect U. S. defense bases in this British colony.

He stepped ashore at Morgan's Island, the location of one of the bases, and then surveyed naval, military and air activities of the United States forces in several crowded hours.

Capt. Jules James, commandant of the naval operating base here, accompanied him on his tour which included Tucker and Darrell islands, and the mainland.

Germany Demanding Troops from Balkans

LONDON, Sept. 25 (AP)—Well-informed circles in Ankara, Turkey, said that Germany was demanding 1,000,000 troops from Italy, Rumania, Hungary, Slovakia and Bulgaria to relieve German troops in Russia during a rest period, exchange telegraph reported tonight.

The British news agency said Bulgaria was resisting the pressure and the Italians, who had been asked for half of that manpower, replied they needed all their strength to retain Libya.

Willkie and Clark Tangle in Probe Of Film Industry

Former Heatedly Charges Latter Does Not Tell the Truth

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 — A shouted assertion by Wendell L. Willkie that Chairman Clark (D-Idaho) was guilty of telling "an absolute falsehood" wound up a turbulent hearing today by a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee investigating alleged propaganda in the movies.

Willkie thundered this accusation into a microphone on the committee table before him when Clark asserted that the 1940 Republican president nominee had described his campaign pledges to keep this country out of war as "campaign oratory."

"You had better check that," broke in Willkie, who was seated with other counsel for the movie producers at the end of the committee table, and had been listening to testimony by Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers.

"I have," Clark replied, "and I also recall your designation of them as campaign oratory."

Willkie Shows Anger

"You have made statements all over the country about what I have said that have no semblance to the facts," Willkie replied.

"I just charged you with saying some of your campaign pledges were "campaign oratory,'" Clark said.

"I made no such statement," Willkie replied heatedly. "When you say that you speak an absolute falsehood."

As the hearing broke up, Willkie explained to reporters that when he referred to "campaign oratory" in a statement made before the Senate Foreign Relations committee several months ago, he was alluding to his campaign warning that the country was likely to become involved in war by April, 1941, if the Roosevelt administration were returned to office.

Clark Admits Mistake

Hastily checking the record of Willkie's statement, Clark approached Willkie and told him that he (Clark) apparently was mistaken in linking the "campaign oratory"

Neutrality Fight Expected To Be Long and Bitter

Bill Asking Outright Repeal Is Strongly Opposed

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP)—The Senate received a resolution calling for outright repeal of the neutrality act today, amid a mounting tumult of controversy over the issue.

It was introduced by Senator McKellar (D-Tenn), long a firm supporter of the administration's foreign policies, with a statement that the act violates the principle of freedom of the seas.

However, it was not clear whether the repealer had the official backing of the administration. President Roosevelt and his lieutenants have been studying the question whether to ask outright or only partial repeal of the act.

Writes in Collier's

Collier's Magazine today released the text of a preface written by Mr. Roosevelt for the publication of his collected public papers and addresses of 1939, in which he said that the failure of Congress to repeal the old arms embargo section of the act in July, 1939, "had much to do with the coming of war when it did—less than two months later."

The president said that although he approved the embargo when it was passed originally in 1935 and when it was extended from time to time, he "regretted" his action because the embargo "played right into the hands of the aggressor nations."

The embargo was repealed in November, 1939, and a new neutrality law passed. At present the principal proviso provisions of the neutrality act prevent American ships from being armed, or from traveling into combat zones.

Wants Complete Repeal

McKellar, in introducing his resolution, told the Senate the law should be repealed in its entirety. The government, he said, was "paying virtually no attention to it," and it should be withdrawn from the statute books for that reason and because it interferes with the freedom of the seas.

"By keeping this law," he said,

Duke and Duchess Greet Cheering Thousands on Visit to Washington

Both Greatly Enjoy Business and Special Trip to Capital

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor brought to Washington today a pledge of British support for defense of America's eastern coast line.

Addressing the National Press Club tonight he said:

"It is the settled policy of the British government to assist the United States to the utmost in providing for the security of their eastern coast line, and as the West Indies have formidable strategic important as air bases for attacks on this continent, their effective defense against all aggressors is important for the safety of the American people."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP)—The duke and duchess of Windsor—gay as a pair of honeymooners — paid a combination business and social visit to the capital today, with thousands of Washingtonians cheering them lustily at every appearance.

The duke called on President Roosevelt, two cabinet officers and Chairman Emory S. Land of the

Invaders Driven Back on Northern And Center Front, Red Report Says

Even Soviet Cavalry Charging Nazi Tanks in Effort To Halt Advance; Crisis Impending

MOSCOW, Sept. 25. (AP)—The Red lines before Leningrad again swung out in a series of savage counter-attacks today and Russians declared the great battle at least momentarily was turning against the invaders.

The Germans were thrown back six miles at one place and control of two villages taken from them, said Soviet accounts.

Concurrently, Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's armies of the center reported new successes at the core of their counter-offensive in the region of Gomel, claiming the recapture of a settlement under cover of Russian aerial assaults which smashed two Nazi companies in a single area of action.

Before Leningrad the struggle appeared to be reaching a crescendo of violence; even Red calvary was said to be charging the mechanized invaders at some points.

Military dispatches to the official army organ Red Star told of the endless arrival of fresh German troops to replace the thousands of fallen, adding that even with these reinforcements the Germans were not able in some areas to hold their siege positions.

The Soviet Baltic and Black Sea fleets, which the Germans air force has been trying so long to smash, were reported still in effective offensive action, a Russian recapitulation of recent engagements reporting the sinking of fifteen German transports and other vessels, the disablement of ten German transports and destroyers and the destruction of a Finnish warship. Major Russian fleet losses announced by the Germans were at the same time denied.

Moreover, it was officially stated

Sec. Morgenthau Creates Stir by Profits Demands

Proposal To Create Limit of 6 Per Cent Strongly Opposed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP)—Secretary Morgenthau shook up Congress and the stock market today by disclosing that treasury experts already were drafting proposed legislation to carry out his suggestion that corporation profits be limited to six per cent until the emergency ends.

When the treasury secretary first advanced this idea yesterday, there had been a napparent disposition in Congress to regard it as one not to be taken too seriously.

But, at midday today, Morgenthau told a press conference that his aides were putting into legal language for presentation to Congress his proposal that all corporation profits in excess of six per cent be siphoned into the government's coffers by taxes.

Awaits Move by Congress

"We will be ready whenever Congress wants to get to work on it," he said.

Wall street took this to mean that the move had the blessing of the administration an da fair chance, perhaps, of becoming law. Prices of many stocks quickly fell one to five points, though some recovered before the close.

At the capitol, many legislators frankly did not know what to think and were reluctant to discuss it, even anonymously. Some were inclined to wonder whether Morgenthau's purpose was not primarily psychological.

"One reason I made this suggestion at this time was that I felt that the complacency of the country called for some kind of statement from me."

Silent About Rosevelt

Asked directly whether the president had indorsed his idea, Morgenthau replied that he never answered such questions.

Two Boys Robbed Of $53,000 in Daylight Robbery

Three Men Escape with Large Amount of Hyattsville Bank's Cash

HYATTSVILLE, Md., Sept. 25 (AP)—Three holdup men, working swiftly and silently a short distance off the busy Baltimore-Washington boulevard, snatched from two young bank messengers today two satchels containing about $53,000 in cash.

Their loot also included two checks totaling $75,000. These, however, were non-negotiable cashier's checks.

Had it not been for an afterthought by the chauffeur for the bandits, their total cash seizure of Prince Georges Bank & Trust Company funds might have been only $16,000.

Both Bandits Armed

The chauffeur drove the bandit car from a curb parking spot on a side street back of the bank into the path of the bank messenger's car. The bank car halted to avoid a collision. Two stickup men leaped at it, one on each side. One pointed a double-barreled shotgun and the other aimed a pistol.

One seized a satchel from the lap of Jack Dameron, 17. The other reached in front of the bank car driver, Van Stauber, 18, turned off the ignition, and put the key in his pocket.

The bandits backed away quickly, but their driver calmly ordered:

"Look in the back seat."

One robber ran forward and jerked from behind the driver's seat the second satchel, containing $37,000.

The trio then sped away in the direction of Washington, avoiding the traffic-congested boulevard.

Insurance Covers Loss

The $16,000 was the payroll of the Washington Suburban Sanitary commission, only about five blocks from the bank. The other money was for the bank's branch in Mt. Rainer, Md., and for deposit in Washington. T. Howard Duckett, the bank president, said the entire loss was covered by insurance.

Washington police, called in to help find the bandits, said the holdup was the largest bank robbery on record in the capital area.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A cryptic German announcement that heavy damage has been inflicted on a Britain-bound convoy "off west Africa" raises again the grave question whether the Nazis are using Dakar or other French African ports as U-boat bases.

Eleven out of a destroyer-protected convoy of a dozen ships were sunk, Berlin says, adding that no less than seven German craft took part in the damaging onslaught.

British versions of the incident were still to come as this was written. There is a strong implication in the German statement, however, that a base of some sort has been developed, perhaps with the tacit "collaboration" of Vichy, on the coast of French West Africa. If that should prove true, Washington and Vichy would be instantly at loggerheads.

Bridgehead Is Danger Point

The South Atlantic bridgehead via Dakar has been stressed by President Roosevelt as a danger point for the new world should it be placed at Germany's disposal. To Britain also, the implications of the Nazi announcement are important. Her South Atlantic life lines, passing close to the West African coast, are second only to her North Atlantic bridge-of-ships. Once London became convinced that German U-boats were using French or Spanish Colonial waters in West Africa for refueling and refitting, the Battle of the Atlantic would take a new turn, with the British on the aggressive to stamp out the danger regardless of what international toes they stepped on.

However, the Nazi South Atlantic submarine raids might have another strategic purpose, aimed as much at American "shoot-first" naval operations in the North Atlantic as England-bound cargoes from the south. If the German raids served to expand by hundreds of miles the defensive zones patrolled by American naval craft or forced the British to rush reinforcements southward from the North Atlantic area, they would be well justified.

Long Trips Possible

Assuming that the flotilla of U-boats concerned in the attack somewhere off the West African coast operated from German-held bases in Continental France, not from West Africa, they traveled a long distance to the attack. It is 2,000 sea miles and more from the probable scene of action off the West African coast to German occupied French ports on the Bay of Biscay.

Working in the closer waters of the North Atlantic that are the bottle-necks of war cargo traffic to England, the same number of submarines could logically expect to do greater damage in less time.

Lacking bases in West Africa, no close U-boat blockade along British South Atlantic sea lanes could be maintained.

If there are no such bases, it follows that the raid was merely an attempt to decentralize British protective measures in the North Atlantic or that counter sea warfare measures against U-boats in the north are increasingly effective, forcing German undersea craft to rove farther afield for victims.

Duke and

Maritime Commission. Everywhere he went crowds appeared, and he responded to their cheers with a wave of the arm or a military salute.

Duke Boyish-Looking

Hatless but with his sandy hair neatly in place, the boyish-looking duke wore a pin-striped, double-breasted gray flannel suit and brown buckskin shoes.

His American-born duchess, the former Wallis Warfield for whom the duke gave up the throne of the British Empire, changed her costume soon after arriving. When she stepped from the train she wore a black, tailored suit with large gold buttons and a turquoise ornament.

Her black hat was trimmed to match her blue dotted blouse and she wore large turquoise earrings and black gloves.

When she joined her husband to call on the president she had changed to a severe wool dress of Wallis blue and a Juliet cap with a nose veil.

Predicts Nazi Defeat

The duke, in his capacity as governor of the Bahama Islands, had visited Secretary of State Hull and afterward expressed to reporters confidence that Britain would win the war.

Government employes jammed the corridors and the streets in front of both the state department and the commerce department, where the duke discussed world shipping with Land.

Land told reporters that he had assured the duke that everything possible was being done to speed deliveries of needed ships.

After the White House call the duchess abandoned the motorcycle escort that had previously heralded her appearances and slipped off alone, except for plain clothesmen, to have luncheon at the apartment of her aunt, Mrs. Buchanan Merryman.

Berlin Reports

—yet, he contended, this system is slipping in the face of the new, "naturally secret", U-boat method of attack.

Only a few months ago, he said, one-half to three-quarters of ships attacked in convoys escaped; today, he pointed to the reported escape of but one ship off West Africa, and eleven sunk.

Big Cargoes Destroyed

A high command statistician further calculated that the slightly less than 1,000,000 tons of shipping reported sunk since June 22 carried goods which would have filled a European freight train 455 miles long—"exclusive of the locomotive", the expert added, precisely.

(It was the first report of a major South Atlantic U-boat attack in some weeks, and it immediately recalled recent stories of interned sailors escaped from Dakar, French Senegal, of the movement in and out of Dakar harbor of some fifteen submarines, flying the French flag but manned by German-speaking crews. Vichy has denied there are any German forces in French West Africa.)

CITES SPY PERIL

Capt. Philippe Magdelain

Spies for the Vichy government are operating throughout the country and reporting directly to the French embassy in Washington, declared Captain Phillippe Magdelain, Free French leader, in a Philadelphia speech. Any information they gather, he pointed out, would be available to the Nazis, who control Paris.

Special Session

to be considered for making a reduction in income taxes. Another $2,000,000 would be cut from 1943 revenues by the property levy reduction. Officials figure a cent on the state rate yields $250,000.

Acts by Proclamation

The governor acted by proclamation to reduce the property levies through power conferred at the last legislature.

A law passed then provided that if state revenues exceeded a surplus of $2,000,000, the board of public works at its discretion could use all or any part of it toward interest and principal on the state debt.

Since all revenues from the real and personal property tax go toward debt retirement, the use of the surplus for this same purpose reduces the amount of property levy revenue needed. Furthermore, the law provides that any reduction under this provision must be applied to the real estate tax.

O'Conor said a special legislative session would be needed to reduce the income tax, but that such action could be taken up until a month before the first installment on that tax becomes due. The due date is April 15, 1942.

reorganization of the army air force was anticipated. The war minister was said to be determined to punish the plotters.

Tonazzi signed the decree just a cabinet meeting, called by acting President Ramon Castillo to discuss the international situation.

Actually, the Zuloaga ouster was the latest of a series of disciplinary measures affecting military men. General Benjamin Menendez recently was ordered confined to his home for two months for writing a letter to the pro-Nazi newspaper El Pampero, which some political circles interpreted as a call for a revolution.

Lieut.-Col. Urbana De La Vega was imprisoned for several months this year at the amy garrison Campode Mayo on a charge of taking part in an alleged revolutionary plot.

General Juan Bautista Molina, accused of leading the plotters, now is awaiting trial on a charge of conspiracy against the security of the state.

As for the latest affair, the public had no official information as to just what the authorities suspected.

of other members. Their liability is unlimited.

One-Year Limitation

Until the 1941 legislature there was no statute of limitations against enforcing such extra assesments in this state. At the last session a law was passed instituting a one-year limitation.

Saying this new law would be matter of defense to be raised by policy holders, Walsh added:

"Whether it is applicable in these suits, and how it is to be construed and applied are all matters which must be decided by the courts in the pending cases, * * * and ultimately by the Court of Appeals."

that aircraft of the Black Sea fleet air arm had smashed twenty-two German guns, forty trucks of infantry and two small tanks in late operations.

The mid-day communique of the Soviet command itself was characteristically restrained. Aside from telling of heavy and inconclusive fighting generally, it reported a series of local successes on the Central front.

(Authoritative British informants in London repeated pessimistic estimates of the Russian situation, specifically reporting that a German attack on the whole Crimean peninsula with a force of up to four divisions apparently was now under way.)

phase with the former candidate's campaign pledges.

"We won't get anywhere in this investigation of alleged propaganda by engaging in references to my speeches and remarks." He went on to complain that "time after time" members of the committee had sought to bring in "extraneous matter about things I have said.

"I think you have been accorded every courtesy," Clark replied with some warmth.

"That's merely a matter of your opinion," Willkie snapped as Clark walked away.

At one point during Warner's testimony, Senator Tobey (R-NH) said Aubrey Blair, former secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, had complained to him that during the filming of a picture titled "Captured" in 1936, Army flying personnel, planes, gasoline and food had been made available free to the movie company.

Blair charged further, Tobey went on, that during filming of "West Point of the Air," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had "deliberately wrecked" six or more government planes to make the picture more effective.

"We produced the picture," interrupted Robert Rubin, counsel for M-G-M, "but we didn't wreck any planes."

Sec. Morgenthau

Morgenthau originally advanced his suggestion while testifying before the House Banking committee on peiding legislation to permit the government to control prices. He indicated at his press conference, however, that he thought such legislation should go to the House Ways and Means committee—the taxing group—rather than be considered as part of the price control measure.

As the banking committee continued hearings today on the latter bill, it heard Leon Henderson, price administrator, advocate a longer working week in certain industries to attain what he said was a badly-needed increase in production.

Henderson asserted that the average working week for manufacturing industries was 40 3-10 hours and added: "I would doubt if we are getting within thirty to thirty-five per cent of the full efficiency of our machine tool capacity."

An electrical engineer by profession after education at Groton and Harvard, Hall Roosevelt was connected for many years with the General Electric Company and lived variously in Alaska, Schenectady, Seattle, Chicago and Detroit. He was twice married—first to Margaret Richardson of Boston and then to Dorothy Kemp of Detroit. Both marriages were dissolved by divorce.

Subpoenae Reports of America First Group

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP) — Government investigators revealed today that they had subpoenaed material from the local office of the America First committee in connection with the justice department's grand jury inquiry into alleged violations of the foreign agents registration act.

The material was enclosed in half a dozen mail sacks, but William P. Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, special assistants to the attorney general in charge of the inquiry, refused to say what the papers and documents included.

The investigation already has resulted in the indictment of Frank Burch, Akron, Ohio, attorney, for failure to register as an alleged agent of the German government.

During the day the grand jury heard five witnesses, among them Prescott Dennett, secretary of the Make-Europe-Pay-War-Debts committee and the Islands-For-War-Debts committee.

Personnel Changes Announced by B. & O.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25 (AP)—W. G. Brown, passenger traffic manager at Chicago, will retire Oct. 1 after fifty-five years service with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Walter B. Calloway, general passenger traffic manager, announced today.

Brown started with the road at Cincinnati in January, 1886 as office boy in the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, now part of the B. & O.

Calloway announced six other personnel changes effective Oct. 1:

J. F. Whittington, now general passenger agent, New York city, will succeed Brwon; R. E. Coleman, division passenger agent, Philadelphia, will succeed Whittington; C. R. Van Horn, division passenger agent, Pittsburgh, will succeed Coleman; H. L. Porter, division passenger agent, Akron, will succeed Van Horn; W. R. Welden, division passenger agent at Toledo will succeed Porter.

H. E. Simpson, assistant to Calloway, will become assistant passenger traffic manager in Baltimore.

Neutrality Fight

"we are indirectly consenting to Germany's claim that she controls part of the waters of the Atlantic ocean."

The passage of the act was a "mistake" in the first place, he said, and had "done no good but merely cluttered up a situation already bad."

After McKellar concluded, Senator Bridges (R-NH) told the chamber that he had voted against the neutrality act in 1939 and that he had "been against it ever since."

"The law was passed under the whip and spur of the administration," remarked Senator Tobey (R-

"That is right," Bridges replied. "The very people who insisted upon its passage are now asking its repeal."

Taft Predicts War

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) meanwhile took the position that repealing the act would be the equivalent of a declaration of war. At a minimum, he said, it would authorize the administration to carry on an undeclared war. He predicted a bitter battle in the Senate over the issue.

Rep. Wadsworth (R-NY) said he hoped the act would be "wiped off the statute books."

"In all our history," he said, "we fought for the right to sail the seven seas at will."

Senator Schwartz (D-Wyo), generally regarded as a middle-of-the-road man where foreign policy controversies are concerned, surprised some of his colleagues by announcing that he was "very much in favor of arming our merchant ships."

Rep. Woodruff (R-Mich) said:

"Every informed member of Congress, and every informed observer in Washington knows that President Roosevelt has not left a vestige of the neutrality act unviolated in spirit, if not in letter.

"Judging by Mr. Roosevelt's past performance, it would matter little to him whether the Congress did or did not modify or repeal the ragged remnants of the neutrality act, because Mr. Roosevelt in effect repeals or modifies and amends statutes to suit himself when he feels the occasion requires."

Russians Hurl

mates were being stormed; but in others the Russians used tanks for local counter-attacks.

A propaganda company report stressed that the Russians were placing great reliance in land mines in the Leningrad area. German engineers, it was said, have finished removing 26,000 of these from the Luga district, which is ninety miles from the city, and even now portions of many towns are closed because the mines have not all been removed. Many civilians were said to have been killed by the mines long after the fighting rolled past.

On the southern front the German armies striking toward Kharkov and the Donets basin were reported, without confirmation to be standing before one of the most important industrial cities of that region.

Newspapers informed the folks at home that failure of letters to arrive from the fighting men on this front should cause no anxiety because "all available transportation facilities are being used for wounded and for required repair material."

Losing Temper Healthful; Keeps Blood Pressure Down and Prevents Apoplexy

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Not long ago I had the pleasure of bringing to your attention a New York doctor's idea that a good cry was of considerable therapeutic value. Many diseases have been cured by a good cry. And now comes my friend, Dr. J. Shelton Horsley, of Richmond, Virginia, who sends me a pamphlet—"In Defense of a Bar Temper."

Thank heaven for people like Dr. Horsley. I didn't realize it before I read his treatise, but it fills a long felt want. For centries we have been advised to control our temper; we have been told that to lose our temper is bad for us. I don't mean we in the editorial sense, but everybody has been told that. It is supposed to embody the wisdom of the ages.

Now comes Dr. Horsley and tells us that it is good for us to lose our tempers. And away down inside of us all the time we have known that as a great fundamental human truth.

Losing your temper doesn't cause apoplexy; it prevents apoplexy. You're mad anyhow, and your adrenal glands are pouring out secretion into your blood stream that raises your blood pressure. And if you keep quiet and coop it all up, something may bust. But if you explode, and let off steam, you use up the adrenalin, and your arteries are saved.

I think it was the late Professor George Lyman Kittredge who said that a few prejudices and a tendency to indignation stiffens a man's moral fibre. It proves he is a man of culture.

And Captain Yancy's cook in "The Vanishing Virginian," said she liked to work for quality folks, she "knowed Mr. Yancey was a 'ristocrat de minute I heerd him cuss so pretty."

So culture, aristocratic bearing and health all follow losing your temper. "Human character," writes Dr. Horsley, "like diet, should be made up of well-balanced elements. A disposition in which there is never any trace of occasional fractiousness would be uninteresting and boring. A bad temper can furnish the necessary additional fuel for unusual physical or mental effort."

It's a wonder we haven't lost our temper at the people who have told us it was bad for us to lose our temper. Come to think of it, we recall that we have.

Questions and Answers

H. P.:—"1. I would like for you to explain and tell why the Wassermann blood test should be given to every person in the Union. 2. Do you think that it is necessary for the Federal Government to enforce this?"

Answer: The Wassermann test is a fairly reliable test to determine the presence of recent or latent syphilis. It is believed that if every person with syphilis could be detected and adequately treated, the disease would disappear. Whether this is an ideal that can be realized, is for time to tell. The federal government can theoretically enforce such a procedure under the clause in the preamble to the Constitution which says "promote the general welfare." Whether the treatment is best carried out privately or by the federal government is another question.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

CALLA LILIES FOR POTTING INDOORS

Calla lily bulbs should be ordered now for indoor planting. Rehmanni is a most unusual calla—the flowers are small but pink in color.

If potting only one bulb, use a six-inch pot. Potting three bulbs in a nine-inch pot is effective.

A good potting mixture is to use equal parts of good loam, sand and leaf mold. To this add either some well rotted cow manure or bonemeal.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, let the growing tip of the bulb protrude above the soil. Have the soil at least one inch below the upper rim of the flower pot, so that later if surface roots appear they can be covered with soil.

After potting, place the bulbs in a cool semi-dark room and water very little for several weeks. When the leaves start growing, place the pots in a light, warm room and give liberal amounts of water.

As soon as the flower stalks appear, feed with liquid manure about once a week, but do this only after they have been well watered.

Army chemists work on a twenty-four hour basis at quartermaster headquarters throughout the country examing the quality and purity of all food shipments for soldiers.

A Death Sentence Victim Who Is Very Much Alive

SOME DEMOCRATIC NEWSPAPERS are expressing satisfaction over what is described as the imposition of the death sentence upon the self-trained braintrusters in Washington—which is probably news to most persons—and particularly over the fact that Tommy the Cork is included.

Well, Tommy may be temporarily off the federal pay roll, but he seems to be far removed from any sort of death sentence so far as his activities in Washington and his income are concerned.

Tommy has another nickname in Washington, it seems. He is no longer "Tommy the Cork," but "Paul Revere Corcoran," around the Justice department, according to Thomas L. Stokes in the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

Stokes, winner of the Pulitzer Prize for good reporting in 1938, has just completed an inquiry into a new angle of the many and varied lobby activities of Tommy Corcoran, which reputedly are giving the latter one of the biggest incomes in Washington. Stokes's findings make interesting reading.

Rumor in Washington has it that Corcoran has received fees totaling more than $250,000 for getting clients favors in the last year. He formerly was a RFC lawyer at $10,000 a year. Recent revelations now demonstrate that when "Tommy the Cork" was receiving but $10,000 a year he was serving his interneship—learning his way around the New Deal departments and making contacts. Now it is reported he is cashing in on that knowledge.

Pulitzer Prize Reporter Stokes — who frequently has been sympathetic to New Deal undertakings—developed that among young Corcoran's many clients was Sterling Products, Inc. This firm was cited by the Justice department for violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust act along with three subsidiaries which had contracts with German companies and a German controlled Austrian company. Several weeks ago these contracts were dissolved by the signing of consent decrees, whereupon the anti-trust proceedings were dropped.

Stokes bluntly asserts that "pressure and pull exerted" by Corcoran brought this conclusion to a case, which the Scripps-Howard reporter contended should have been referred to a federal grand jury. According to Stokes the settlement "was imposed from the top" by Attorney-General Francis Biddle, who was "in constant touch with Mr. Corcoran" whom he describes as "a long-time friend of the attorney-general."

"He (Corcoran) was influential in bringing Mr. Biddle into the administration and was active on behalf of Mr. Biddle's recent promotion from solicitor-general to attorney-general," Stokes reported.

Stokes added that Corcoran "practically camped" in Biddle's office and was "given access to secret information of the department concerning the case" and that "he was kept in constant touch with the drafting of the consent decrees and contributed his advice to the writing of the statement for the press which was described by those who know the facts as a 'whitewash' with misleading inferences and actual misstatements."

Corcoran constantly demanded "speed" in the settlement of the case, Stokes reported. He received the nickname of "Paul Revere Corcoran," Stokes wrote, after a "night ride into the Virginia mountains" to get Attorney-General Biddle's name to a letter to Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones requesting information about aspects of the South American drug trade for use in the case.

"The letter was prepared," reported Stokes. "Tommy wanted to get it into Secretary Jones's hands at once. He wanted everything in connection with the case done in a hurry. But Mr. Biddle's signature was required and Mr. Biddle was not in Washington. He was at Skyland, Va.

"Tommy would not listen to suggestions that the letter await Mr. Biddle's return from his week-end. It must be signed right away. So he persuaded Thurman Arnold, head of the Anti-Trust division, to go with him by automobile at night to Skyland to get the attorney-general's signature. They located Mr. Biddle and he signed.

"This is typical of what is now called around the department the 'Corcoran blitz' on behalf of his clients."

So it appears, according to this report, that Tommy of the nicknames is not fatally affected by the so-called brain-truster death sentences.

Priority Profiteering Shows Need for Price Control

IT IS DIFFICULT to think of something that would arouse the indignation of the citizenry to greater heat than the report that "priority profiteers" are active in the land, feathering their own nets at the expense of their nation's welfare.

The Price Control administration has sought the aid of the department of Justice in a battle against brokers, many of them in business less than a year, who are alleged to have hiked the prices of some important chemicals from 100 to 440 per cent. They are said to be charging exorbitant prices for commonly-used products essential in the manufacture of drugs, paints, textiles, dyes and plastics. A large part of the business is with small firms which fear more drastic priority restrictions and shortages and feel compelled to buy at any price asked.

Price administration officials called upon the Justice department to act under the Sherman Anti-Trust law on the ground that many brokers were buying chemicals and storing them in warehouses, thus attempting to "corner" the market. The fact that a score of complaints are received from business men daily indicates that the abuse has grown to considerable proportions.

Such sky-rocketing of prices makes an effective argument for the necessity of price control legislation. The government cannot permit conditions to exist which lead the people to believe that the defense program is filling the pockets of racketeers. People asked by their government to make sacrifices expect that their government, in turn, will see to it that they are not exploited.

Kid Football Players Are in the Streets

NOTING that the annual hazard of kids' football games in the streets is again upon us, the Keystone Automobile Club warns all motorists to "look out for those juvenile forward passers" and directs attention to the parental responsibility involved.

"City and town streets are mighty dangerous places in which to play with anything so erratic as a football," observes Edward P. Curran, Keystone safety director, in recommending that games be confined to safer areas wherever possible.

"With the football season getting under way," he said, "there has been a veritable swarm of juvenile footballers on the streets of practically every village and town in the state. 'Touch' footballs and regulation-size ovals are darting erratically through the air with youngsters running wildly in pursuit. Even the most careful motorist has difficulty in avoiding children engaged in the game, when they come at him from unexpected angles.

"We believe this is essentially a parental problem. Motorists do not deliberately run down children engaged in play, but under modern traffic conditions they cannot reasonably be expected to bear the entire burden of safety. It is primarily a duty of parents to safeguard their offspring, and they can do this best by discouraging street football and other practices which unnecessarily endanger the lives of children."

Both motorists and parents should give due heed to this sensible advice.

Secret Weapons Are Not Yet in Evidence

NOT MUCH has been heard of secret weapons since the time early in the war when Germany sought to dismay Britain by claiming to possess one. When the forts fell at Liege, Belgians who escaped were quoted as saying some mysterious device had silenced their weapons, paralyzed them and made their surrender certain.

Nothing more has been heard of this. Surely Hitler, if he possessed such a weapon, would have employed it to invade England and would be using it now to subdue the Red army.

War reporters content themselves with accounts of superior weapons recently perfected. A correspondent just arrived from London reports Britain has a new plane, the Typhoon, which can fly rings around the Spitfire and that it will sweep the skies.

The British are also putting into service American powered torpedo boats which are the fastest things on the seas and presumably will make ocean lanes untenable for raiding submarines. Russia declares it has a tank that breaks up Hitler's mechanized spearhead like so much glass.

But observing citizens are rather well convinced that this war will not be won by a single weapon, mysterious or otherwise, but by a preponderance on one side, probably through availability of supplies, of power to crush its opponents.

With four-fifths of the world's population reported to be at war, it is easy to believe that some European refugees paid $1,400 for passage to the United States.

Junior is nothing if not up-to-date. Last night he asked Dad to convoy him through his homework arithmetic problems.

Denver had the earliest snowfall since 1929, which should give the goosebone weather prophets something definite to work on.

Free Enterprise Is Not Doomed Here, Historian Says

Is our democratic system of free enterprise in danger? "No," says James Truslow Adams, the famous historian and writer, in Forbes Magazine. Mr. Adams, however, calls upon business leaders to do their part and cooperate in the vast economic readjustments that are now under way.

"Every civilization," says Mr. Adams, "which has attained comparative permanency has been a 'business civilization'—based on production of goods for exchange at a profit for some.

"Business has been through many changes, a multitude of them pronounced by the leaders of the time as catasthrophic and threatening total loss.

— o —

Heavy Losses Seen

"In the changes which are coming, there may be very heavy, and, in some cases, total losses. As business men and investors we would like to know what those cases may be, but that is part of the art of investing. America has had heavy losses before. A century ago in the panic of 1837 it is said that fifty per cent of all the property in the United States changed hands, and there were about 1,400 different kinds of counterfeit money in circulation. I need not mention other crises and depressions.

"We are not fearing merely a depression at present but a change in the whole fabric of society and law. Yet think how that fabric, especially economically, has changed in 150 years, and then study the charts of the ups and downs of business, while those greatest and most sudden and unexpected changes in the history of the race were occurring.

The answer is that human nature does not change so fast, and also that the men of those five generations had the vision to adjust themselves.

— o —

Readjustment Necessary

"From such knowledge as I have of that past, from my estimate of the qualities of the American people and what they are likely to want for many generations to come (aside from human nature of all races through thousands of years), it is my belief that business is not threatened with extinction but unquestionably with need for enormous readjusting.

"Business men have not yet, at least, received a death sentence, but, on the contrary, a ringing challenge from the whole nation to assume leadership, and join in searching for the right answers to the questions which the president and the people, striving blunderingly to work out the final step in democracy, are asking. If they can become leaders and perform their social task they need not worry about business, their future status or America, but if they sulk and fail, they will fall like the noblesse of old France, and perhaps carry themselves, their investors and the whole nation down with them."

New Light Shed On Wasserdunk

Baltimore Minister Finds That Union with Leaping Fawn was Solemnized

Editor The Cumberland News:

It is with regret that I find myself drawn into the lamentable Wasserdunk controversy, but I feel that the examination of certain information which has been in the possession of my family for a number of years will throw new light on the subject and possibly end the current series of unsavory incidents which may otherwise terminate in bloodshed. As a retired minister, I feel that this is my Christian duty.

Excluding the pecuniary angles of Elijah Wasserdunk's life—such as the "salting" of the Paw Paw Cave, his purchase of the C. & O. rights-of-way, the illegal trading with the Western Tribes and the sale of commissions in the state militia (all involving sums of over $500.00, far exceeding the total salary received by a minister in cash of the fruits of the soil) it seems to me that the unhappy argument centers about one question: Did Elijah Wasserdunk marry and, if so, whom? I hope the following data will be of interest to Mr. Dernt and others whose statements and letters to the newspapers have aroused so much interest and controversy.

The diary of the Rev. Augustus Brown, Presbyterian delegate to the Ohio territory, contains the following entry under date of February 17, 1809:

"On my arrival at the Iroquois winter camp, I found that my language studies at Philadelphia were of much practical value. Thanks to Mr. James Guber's excellent dictionary, I could readily converse with the heathen although I soon detected words in their vocabulary which had escaped Mr. Guber's attention. I notice that "Wasserdunk" frequently occurs in their conversation and it seems that this is the name of one of their tribal dieties. Whenever the word "Wasserdunk" is mentioned, the women usually cover their heads and retire to their lodges while the warriors look serious and talk about the weather. Usual prayer."

An entry of June 7, 1810: "Met Elijah Wasserdunk. Prayed for three hours."

Entry of March 22, 1811: "Today, God pardon me, I married Elijah Wasserdunk with Leaping Fawn, daughter of the first war chief who owns 3,000 deer skins." (12 pages of wedding orgy are omitted.) "Perhaps a woman's influence will guide the fiend into a new life—although I doubt it. I discovered yesterday that the horrible rumor among the Hurons, which led to my undignified retreat through the snows to Fort Dearborn, was originated by Wasserdunk. The beast told the Hurons, my faithful friends, that there were now nine blue-eyed Iroquois papooses named Augustus. The Hurons sold him their furs at a special price, in return for this false news. They then went on the war path."

"Wasserdunk left this afternoon for St. Louis. Prayed for five hours and tomorrow will resume my missionary labors."

These extracts from the Rev. Mr. Brown's diary prove that Wasserdunk's nuptial ceremonies took place on March 22, 1811. It therefore follows that all his lineal descendants are in part original Americans, of which they should be justly proud. Perhaps the present dissatisfaction of the Wasserdunks with the formalities of conventional modern life may be attributed in whole or in part to their original forebear: Leaping Fawn. May I urge all readers to submit such information regarding the Wasserdunks as may come to their notice? The absence of such complete sociological studies of family life is indeed deplorable in American ethnology.

Respectfully,

HENRY LOMIS.

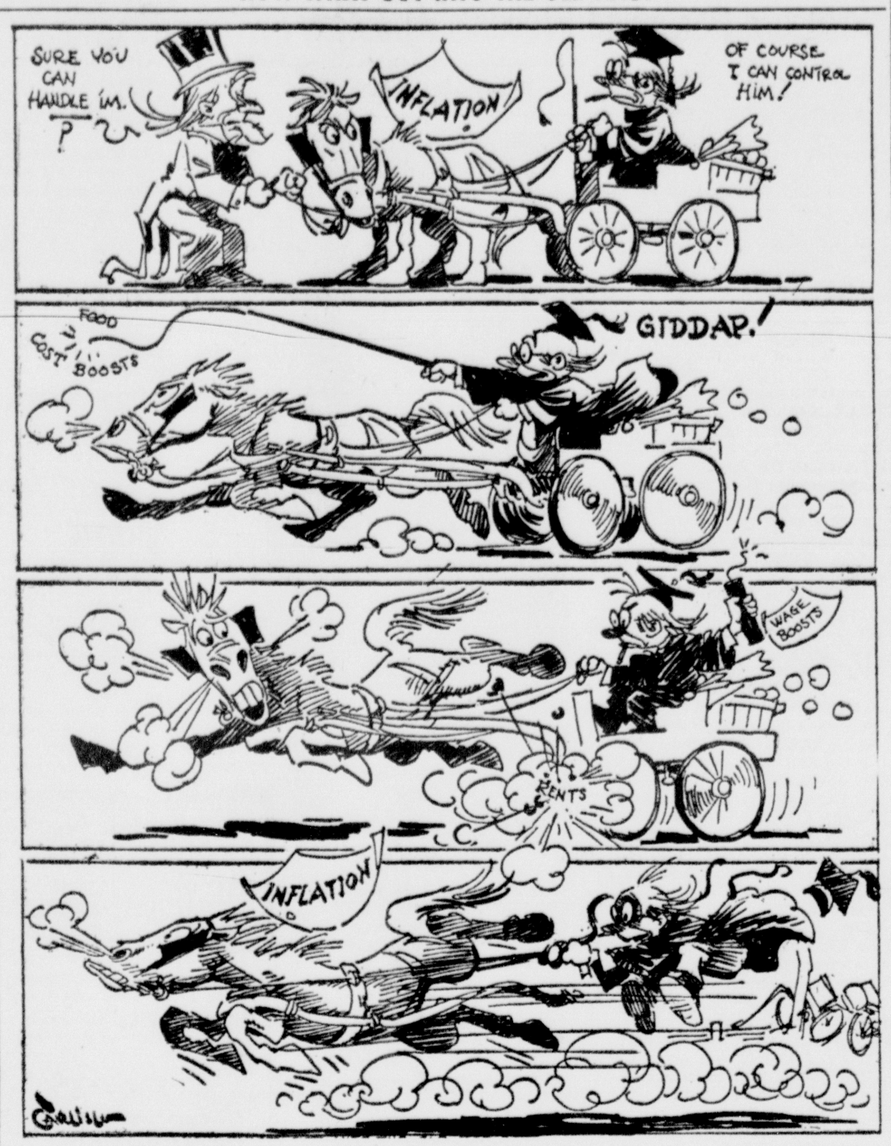
STRIKES "DISLOYAL"

Mitchell F. Hepburn

Pictured as he arrived in New York for an American visit, Mitchell F. He urged drastic measures against persons who promote work

NOW WHAT GOT INTO THE OLD NAG!



Transportation Needs Gearing and a Two-Fisted Chief, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—In all the growing overhead control for the purposes of speeding up industrial mobilization, who is charged with making the maximum and quickest use of transportation? It is impossible to avoid superlatives in dealing with this subject. On the surface they may seem to be exaggerations but they are not.

Hugh S. Johnson

Take the case of a ship loaded with war supplies for England. There are plenty of most kinds of supplies. The trick is to get them overseas. If the "turnaround" (time consumed in loading, unloading and round trip) of that ship is cut in half, it is not hard to see that what you are doing is just doubling both the rate and the amount of supply. No amount of jumping up and down and yelling about the need for increased factory effort would be half as effective as a successful attempt to increase the speed of transportation both here and abroad. We found that out during World war 1 when we cut in half the "turnaround" time of trans-Atlantic ships—transports and freighters.

— o —

Variety of Devices

If it hadn't been done we could hardly have made half the effort we did. It was done by a variety of devices the best of which was increasing the speed of loading and unloading both by mechanical devices and bettered organization and unrelenting drive and effort.

The case at sea is not quite the same now due to magnificent distances and lack of port facilities, but the principle is the same for the domestic or even the overseas problem.

Take as another case the supposed gasoline shortage in our eastern states. It is quite clear now that there is no gasoline shortage. It is a transportation shortage. So what do we do? Mr. Ickes says, "build a pipe line." Mr. Wallace's SPAD says "no soap"—or rather—"no steel."

— o —

Figures Contradictory

The association of American railroads says, "use our idle tank cars." Mr. Ickes's people say their idleness is "theotretical." I have seen the figures on both sides. They are contradictory. But this is just a question of fact. Somebody ought to be able to decide what is truth. Look out your car window as you pass through oil towns or distribution centers such as Savannah. There you will see rank on rank of empty tank cars. I am informed that the average standstill at Savannah of 133 tank cars in July was 15.4 days. Of forty-five cars the standstill was 36.6 days and of some 15.7 days.

I use these somewhat controversial figures only by way of illustration of the fact that some dynamic two-fisted guy should be given the job of making Sammy's tremendous transportation system clink into high gear. Sure, I know that Ralph Budd, who is a top-hole railroad man, has a little fraction of the job as to railroads. The Maritime Commission has part of it as to ocean transport and Jerry Land, head of that commission, says that at least a part of the solution is concrete barges for towing—as this column advocated months ago. But who pulls all these guys together, including Mr. Ickes, and gets a combined and agreed result? The answer is as in dear old Bert Williams's classic song—"Nobody."

Combination Effective

Since this column started to point up this discussion it has been deluged with suggestions—for example, that trucks freighting east from the unrestricted area be required to carry the gasoline for their return trip in drums and that eastern truck freighters headed west stock up out there, etcetra. None of these suggestions alone will solve the problem but a combination of them could dent it. Who is doing that—again "nobody."

I am glad that John Carmody is going to take a census of American motor vehicles. He ought to include air vehicles. We are duplicating the best civilian, truck, bus and air transport system in the world with a military system which is idle most of the time.

There is a ridiculous blind-spot here and it ought to be covered by appointing, if only in an advisory capacity, an experienced chief of transportation.

Hedges and Wildlife

From the Christian Science Monitor

A few years ago, clean fences and walls were one of the signs of a good farmer. Today wise farmers are leaving a strip of grass and brush along their boundaries.

The experts of the Department of Agriculture and the State experiment stations have found that it pays to leave these strips of brush. These hedges are havens for wildlife. The song birds, quail, and pheasants make their homes in these protected areas. In return for their nesting sites, the feathered friends of man aid him in controlling insects of all kinds. This is practical, inexpensive conservation.

Pinheaded Philosophy

That is What B. C. Forbes Says of the Idea To Belittle Advertising

B. C. Forbes, noted business analyst, calls curtailment or cessation of advertising by companies with an abundance of war orders on their books "pinheaded philosophy."

"From now on," states the writer, "it is going to be more difficult than ever before for corporations and other businesses to retain the goodwill of their customers. It is relatively easy to give satisfaction when all orders can be promptly filled. But many concerns will not be able in the nearby future to fill customers' requirements. This means a delicate problem, calling for the exercise of business statesmanship of the highest order.

"Farsighted managements realize that they must put forth supreme efforts, all through these temporarily abnormal times, to build strong foundations for the future, that they must leave undone nothing calculated to placate customers whose needs they cannot adequately fill, to keep their company and its products prominently before the public, to explain all along why, because of their patriotic work for national defense, they have been deprived of the materials and facilities necessary for properly filling non-defense demands of even their most cherished peacetime customers.

"The costliest of 'saving' in the long run," concludes the writer, "would be to curtail or stop institutional and product advertising, to dismiss salesmen and thus cut down calls on customers clamoring for undeliverable goods."

Even the Experts Are Put in Dark By Contradictions

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Events and speeches and rumors and denials contradict one another so frequently these days that news does not make much sense.

Representative Dirksen

The other day Congressman Everett M. Dirksen, an influential Republican in the House of Representatives, appealed to his G. O. P. fellow members to support President Roosevelt's foreign and domestic policies, political partisanship being altogether out of place in the midst of the present emergency.

Almost simultaneously Congressman Joseph W. Martin, the minority representatives' leader in Washington, was telling a Republican rally at Altoona, Pa., that constitutional government and private enterprise are threatened with extinction after the war, by the administration's "reckless spending" today.

— o —

Carry-over Seen

To be sure, Joe Martin spoke specifically of "non-defense spending," but he made it abundantly clear as his opinion that New Deal planners aim at a carry-over of emergency executive powers into the post-war era.

Congressman Dirksen's and Martin's utterances scarcely harmonize. Everett's an all-outer. Joe has his fingers crossed. Everett got some hearty Republican applause in Congress, but Joe also got a lot of it at his Altoona rally.

Agriculture Secretary Claude R. Wickard, addressing a recent Chicago gathering of farm officials, dwelt upon the importance of accumulating a huge supply of American food, pointing out that the war-torn world will be almost wholly dependent on us shortly—it will have to accept our dictation at the peace table, or we can let it starve to death. So we'll be able to conclude a just peace all around.

— o —

Difference of Opinion

"Sure enough," agrees Congressman Martin. "It'll be the signal for us to put the whole earth on our relief rolls."

As Secretary Wickard sees the future we'll be fixed to compel the creation of an idealistic new age. As Congressman Martin sees it, Claude may be right, but it'll be expensive and we'll foot the bill.

The administration was anxious for approval of its policy of conscription of military manpower at the American Legion's Milwaukee convention a short while ago and the convention voted its okay. An important administration element likewise wanted an okay of capital, labor, industrial and property conscription, but on that proposition the convention drew the line. It would be Fascism, one of the delegates declared.

Recently Vatican sources emitted the information that Pope Pius, very politely, had turned down a request from President Roosevelt delivered to him by Myron Taylor, our presidential envoy to the papal court, that he declare war against Nazi-ism "a just war," the papal objection being based on the ground that his holiness didn't like to call ANY war "a just war."

— o —

Denied by Taylor

Now Myron Taylor denies that he delivered such a request.

Which one knows best? — the Vatican or Myron?

Quite a notability by the name of Jefferson, lobbying in Washington for anti-loan shark legislation, lately introduced himself to me asking for a bit of publicity in behalf of his cause.

"Any relative of Thomas?" I asked.

"I'm proud of the name," he replied, "and I believe in many of the things Thomas said, but I've a notion that Alexander Hamilton had more or less right on his side, too.

"You know, he once remarked that a statesman who's outstandingly urgent as an advocate of the common people — the masses — has a tendency, unconsciously, to become a dictator."

I never had heard that crack of Alexander before.

— o —

Fits into Suspicions

It evidently fits, however, into a great many folk's suspicions of the New Deal. They appear to have a subsconscious hunch that it's so democratic as to be in danger of getting clear around the circle, into the autocratic arc.

Maybe that explains all these contradictions I've been referring to.

Of course the air's full of unauthenticated rumors, too. Officialdom's so secretive in emergencies that its doings have to be largely guessed at. Some guesses probably are right and some undoubtedly are wrong. History should reveal which is which, but that'll be for posterity to find out. We're only guessing now.

Charge Trawlers Break Fish Laws

Wasteful Practices Also Declared Harmful at Ocean City

OCEAN CITY, Md., Sept. 24 (AP)—Wasteful practices of commercial fishermen and illegal activities of offshore trawlers are rapidly depleting the fishing grounds off this Maryland port, sports and hook-and-line fishermen contended.

Donald Harmon, seafood dealer, and Captain Crawford Savage, dean of party fishing boat captains, asserted that undersized trout, butterfish and bluefish were being destroyed by the thousands by commercial firms, and charged that trawlers were operating within the three mile limit in violation of the Maryland law.

They advocated a state law to compel pound-net and trawler fishermen to cull their catches and throw back undersized fish before returning to port.

At present, they said, commercial fishermen return to the docks before culling their catch and thousands of small fish are smothered. When the catch is culled on the docks, Harmon said, the small fish are either shoveled overboard in the harbor or hauled off for fertilizer.

Captain Savage charged in addition that trawlers, operating from Virginia, New Jersey and Massachusetts ports, were cruising within the three-mile-off-shore limit in violation of the Maryland law, dragging their nets on the bottom through sports fishing areas and taking fish of all sizes.

Hillman Says He Is in Charge of U. S. Labor Policy

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 25 (AP)—Sidney Hillman says if anyone objects to present labor policies under the New Deal they should blame him and not President Roosevelt.

"I am responsible for the labor policies of this administration," the associate director general of the OPM told the CIO-affiliated Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America convention.

"President Roosevelt placed me in charge of labor policies when he appointed me to the OPM," he said, "and since then I have not been turned down by the president even once on any matter pertaining to labor. If anything is wrong don't blame him. Blame me."

He added:

"Organized labor no longer has any need to fear. Labor is so well organized that frankly I think the only people in position to damage labor now are those within the labor movement."

SYNOPSIS

Leaving New York for Miami to marry again, HALLIE SINGLETON, a fashion model, reminisces about the time, six years before, when she was only 21 years old and had just met ERIC ADAMS, a young would-be actor. She remembers how SHEILA SHERMAN, a chorus girl and friend of Eric's, appeared on the scene.

YESTERDAY: Hallie writes to her father and asks for $500 of her money.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

HALLIE rather dreaded Christmas Eve because her heart was sick with longing for her family. Her father had written her, when he sent her the check for $500, that the usual quota of aunts and uncles would be with them, but she knew how much he would miss her. As for her mother, she could not know. Mummie had never answered any of her letters, so Hallie had taken to writing "Dear Mummie and Daddy—"

But when Christmas Eve came, there was so much excitement in the little apartment; it was so full of people and packages and plans for a party that she could put the thoughts of home out of her mind.

Eric was as delighted as a child, begging to open the presents that came, tacking up the greens they bought, trimming the frosted tree with blue bells and blue lights, hating to leave them all—Glory and Alexis and Dennis and Christine—when it was time to go to the theater.

Later, when he got back, there was to be a supper.

The presents were not to be opened until they were alone on Christmas.

On Christmas Day, when they awoke a little after noon, for the party had not broken up until five, their ten-foot square of sky was gray and heavy. The living room was littered with the debris of the night before and the frosted tree, with its blue lights, looked most un-Christmasy.

Hallie, emptying ash trays, putting coffee on the stove in the messy kitchenette, tried to sing a Christmas carol to move the lump in her throat.

In Worburn they would just be coming home from church. The house would be filled with the scent of pine and burning logs, the succulent smell of turkey and good things cooking.

She could see every colored bell on the big tree in the corner of the drawing room.

With misty eyes she swabbed at dishes in the sink, popped two pieces of toast into the toaster and got out a tray for Eric's breakfast.

They would have no Christmas dinner in their apartment. Pearl had the day off and they were having a gang in for eggnogs at four.

Hallie's stomach yearned for home-cooked turkey. Two large tears splashed down the front of her housecoat. And then Eric's arms were around her and Eric was saying, "This is the happiest Christmas I've ever known. To have you and this home of ours."

"Darling!" The sun came out from the clouds in her eyes. One didn't need turkey to make a Christmas.

She poached eggs and spread the toast with anchovy paste while Eric washed the dishes. Eric, in pajamas, washing dishes and regaling her with tales of back-stage gossip, was the only sight she wanted. It was a rare one.

When breakfast was over, Eric cleaned up the apartment while she changed into her clothes, and when she came back into the living room, he had stacked the presents they were to open.

There was a big box from Worburn, addressed in her father's writing. There were several smaller ones, too, from her home town. And there was a big box from East Lynbrook. Hallie had sent gifts to her family: a golf sweater to her father and a lovely, soft bed-jacket to her mother, but she and Eric had sent nothing but a card to Win.

Eric said, "What shall it be first?"

"Our presents to each other, darling."

From Hallie to Eric, there was a silk-striped dressing gown, a thin leather cigaret case, a white evening scarf, over which he exclaimed with loud enthusiasm.

From Eric to Hallie, there was an evening cape, a long white woolen cape lined with scarlet. It took Hallie's breath away. What, she thought, in the midst of her breathless thanks, had it cost?

There were little things from Eric, and others: lingerie and perfume, pocketbooks, and from Sue a handsome scrapbook and shears. Oh, there were neckties and socks and much too-expensive trifles from the boys and girls who came to their apartment. Eric had seen to it that he and Hallie bought much-too-expensive gifts for them, too.

At last there were only two packages to open—the big boxes from East Lynbrook and the one from Worburn.

"Yours first," Hallie insisted.

They tore off the wrappings and opened the envelope with Win's card. "Merry Christmas" was all it said. There was a wonderful ham and a big fruit cake and jars and jars of luscious preserved plums and peaches, and a big jar of homemade chili sauce.

Hallie's eyes danced in her head. "How perfectly grand!"

Eric shook his head respondently, as if he could never make her understand.

Privately, Hallie's mental picture of Eric's brother was a composite of all she'd heard of grim, granite-faced New Englanders. She imagined him flinty of eye and voice, but she knew that he had the heart that Eric denied him when she saw his gifts, and thought—rightly—that he had chosen them from wisdom and not because they were economical for him, since they came from his own kitchen.

She said, "Of course, it's grand! It's a folksy present, darling. Christmas is folksy. I'll bet none of the rest of our crowd got anything as good as this. We've got people, Eric. Now let's see what Daddy and Mummie sent."

She didn't really mean that about including her mother, too, when she said it, but her heart beat unevenly when she opened the big package from Worburn. After all, her mother loved her, and surely at Christmas—

She tore at the wrappings, looking for a card, but there were only the tags saying "With love to Hallie from her Dad" and "For Eric from Dad." There were two historical novels for Hallie, two anthologies of great plays for Eric. A pair of scarlet leather bedroom slippers for Eric and a frivolous pair of fur mules for Hallie. Thoughtfully selected gifts. Other years, Daddy had always given her a check for a hundred, in addition to her gifts. This year, he must know that she needed it.

But, of course, he wouldn't. She had been most emphatic about Eric's success. And she wouldn't really have needed it if they were not living beyond their income. She banished the unpleasant thinking to which she was giving way.

And she tried to banish the sunken feeling that attacked her when she thought of her mother's silence. Her loneliness for her mother grew and, growing, merged with something else of which she was becoming increasingly aware: it was an awareness of the fragility of the bark on which she and Eric sailed the full tide of their life. It was an exhilerating ride in a paper boat, a week to week existence with not the slightest knowledge of what would happen when Eric's show closed and the little boat collapsed.

Hallie had only been married three months. The show would last, at least, a year, Eric predicted. Hallie was foolish to have worrying thoughts. But Hallie was not used to having bills mount up, and she lacked the thing that made it possible to be blithe about forgetting them.

Somehow she must make Eric see that tomorrow had to be considered, that something had to be done about living within their means and saving for that "liberty period" which was inevitable.

Only, as Sue pointed out to her, SHE couldn't put it to Eric on the basis that he had a responsibility to her. That would make the marriage tie too uncomfortably obvious.

Who then?

Who, but his brother Win?

Hallie wrote to Win, and this time she did not tell Eric that she had written. After all, there wasn't anything in the letter that Eric shouldn't know—she only thanked him, charmingly and simply, with warmth, for his welcome gifts—unless it was the postscript in which she said that she hoped Win would one day come and visit them.

these children had "perfect" teeth, Dr. Cook said a check-up showed.

The so-called balanced diet of the wealthy orphanage thus apparently had no appreciable effect on the teeth of the youngsters so long as candy and sugar were used, while in the other institution elimination of candy and sugar seemed to more than make up for the possible deficiencies in the diet.

There is undoubtedly a definite relation between diet and the condition of the teeth, the speaker went on, adding that it appears diet is actually the "controlling factor." But he pointed out again that making of hard and fast rules is not yet possible.

Turning to the shortage of dentists, Dr. Cook pointed out that there are approximately twenty-six dental men here, as compared to eighty physicians. All Cumberland dentists are very busy, he added.

The undermanning of the profession is being further complicated by other factors, he went on, pointing out that the profession will lose about 2,500 men this year because of death or retirement and another 3,000 who are entering the armed services. To offset this loss, totaling 5,000, only about 1,600 new men will enter the field.

Dr. Cook noted that the educational qualifications for dentists are being constantly broadened. Not many years ago, two years of study was all that was required, but now six years is the general minimum, he said.

12 Years Required

A new peak has now been reached, he continued, with the development of the "Harvard Plan," which requires a dental student to obtain a medical doctor's degree before becoming a full-fledged dentist. The course of study prescribed under this set-up is at least twelve years.

Dr. Cook indicated that he thought such a step was carrying things too far, although he added that its value remained to be determined.

The dentist also called attention to a puzzling condition that prevails despite the progress that has been made in raising the standards of the dental profession. While the dentists have become better equipped in every way during the past quarter-century, the dental health of the nation is no better, he said.

Examinations of young men under the Selective Service act have shown approximately the same dental deficiencies revealed by the 1917-18 draft, Dr. Cook declared.

This condition is connected, of course, with the fact that the vast majority of the American people receive no dental care, he said, leaving his fellow-Kiwanians to ponder on the solution to this growingly serious problem.

Guests at the meeting included A. L. Simpson, of Hagerstown, and J. Leon Bozman, of Baltimore.

National Dog Week, Sept. 21-27, brings a reminder that America's all-out defense effort has canines stepping, as well as their masters.

THEY MASCOT: "Sergeant York" travels with Company D, 160th Infantry, Camp San Luis Obispo, Calif., in bike basket.

THEY GRIEVE: As did Poochie when her master, Jack Washmon, Tyler, Tex., joined navy. She went on hunger strike.

THEY GUARD: Herman, the watchdog in Minneapolis defense plant, wears identification tag and has "paw print" taken.

THEY FLY: Teddy, with his parachute strapped on, is mascot of 7th Bombardment Squadron at Hamilton Field, Calif. He has spent 245 hours in the air, more than a lot of trainees.

THEY ENTERTAIN: Nigg was the winner as canines put on dirtiest dog contest for soldiers busily training at Ford Ord, Calif. He was in class all by himself.

question of discipline as the observance of a military ritual, indicative of soldierly pride, esprit de corps, and the disciplinary standard of a military unit.

"The punctilious and prompt manner with which a salute is rendered denotes and emphasizes the aggressiveness, alertness, high morale, and cooperative spirit of the individual and the command he represents.

"Consequently, all true soldiers honor the tradition of the salute by a careful and rigid observance of the time-honored rules and regulations prescribed therefor.

"The traditional and psychological importance of the salute loses its value and significance when rendered in an inattentive, careless manner or without the heartfelt pride essential to efficiency in the soldier's profession. Slovenliness or slackness in rendition of the salute indicates indolence, indifference or an absence of self-respect and organizational pride.

"The salute is a military function and should be made in a military manner—in the attitude of attention and respect, with body and head erect and eyes focused on those of the party saluted, with a facial expression of soldierly pride, determination and co-operation—with a smartness and accuracy of hand and arm movement to denote personal aggressiveness and alertness.

"The courtesy of the salute is incumbent on all military personnel in posts, camps, or stations, in uniform or civilian clothes. Off duty, and when not in a post, camp or station, the salute is optional unless you are addressed by an officer. However, the exchange of salutes in public places impresses the public with our professional sincerity, and stamps officers and enlisted men as members of the governmental instrumentality which insures law and order and the preservation of the Nation."

MARYLAND WILL USE TWO TEAMS AGAINST HAMPDEN SYDNEY

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 25 (AP)—The University of Maryland plans to two-team Hampden Sydney's football outfit into submission in the opening game for the Terrapins here Saturday afternoon.

Coaches reported today the Terps' first eleven will start, but it is hoped the trend of battle will allow the second outfit to take over the fight before the first half is completed.

The second aggregation will have Lop Hesson and Jack Gilmore at end, Jack Dittmar and Max Hunt at tackles, Mal Berry and Eddie Chovans at guards, Jim Wharton at center, and Mearle Duvall, Bernie Ulman, Elmer Rigby, and Jack Mier, in the backfield.

Of these Gilmore, Hunt, Berry, Wharton, Duvall, Ulman, and Rigby are lettermen. Others are rookies.

The Terrapins spent a long session today running through signal drills and plays, with some defense work added for extra measure.

Little Aid for Reds Through Iran Area

By DANIEL DE LUCE

TEHERAN, Iran, Sept. 25 (AP) — British and Russian experts are working feverishly to establish an effective backdoor supply route through Iran to the hard pressed Russian armies but so great have been the obstacles that thus far the hoped-for flow of supplies has been only a trickle.

Informed persons said today that a few tons of Indian jute is all Britain has been able to send by this route. Since the Iranian army ceased resistance to the Allied occupation a month ago not a single British cartridge has been sent across Iran to the Soviet, it was asserted.

THE DAILY STORY

ENGAGEMENT

It Was New Year's Eve, and Love Was a Bubble That Might Break—or Be Blown Away by the Wind

By ANTOINETTE TEMPLETON

You see, it started just like in story books you used to read when you were little. You know the kind—where the prince comes from out of nowhere, sees the princess at a ball and it's love at first sight. Duncan was the prince and I the fairy princess in a shockingly modern flame formal. Our palace ballroom was the Prism Room with a little blackamoor in his plumed turban to complete the setting. It was New Year's Eve and life was as bubbly as the wine we were drinking. What more could a girl ever ask for?

That's when it began. A year of laughing, loving, completely slaphappy romance. And don't ever believe that old story about the Scotchman and the moths in his purse. Duncan and I were always broke 'cause he kept believing he was Croesus. The only thing Scotch about him was his name and that fascinating accent.

I just noticed. You have a slight accent, too. I've been hearing about you from Mary-Gay ever since we met her a year ago and became such good friends. Now, you two are apartment hunting, I understand.

Dunc and I rented the most adorable four-room apartment I had ever seen. A large living-room with a fireplace that practically looks like it works and a bedroom that we decided was going to be blue. The bathroom has little guppies swimming around the rim of the tiles, and a kitchenette that would make any career woman decide she just wasn't living right.

You see, we were much more fortunate than most young couples. I had inherited two love seats with only three months storage due on them, and Dunc had his typewriter and an original etching of two Scotch terriers. What's more we both loved spaghetti, and it's the only thing I know how to cook!

You bet, that's love. Oh, we knew it was the real thing right away. I remember that drive home on our third date just as though it were last night. Funny, how clear it is to me—a cold, blue moon making the country snow sparkle, the crunching sound of the tires resounding brittily in the air. He stopped the car right in its icy path by that tall landmark pine. He didn't take me in his arms, didn't try to kiss me. Just took both my hands in his and looked at me. "Penny, dear—I love you. I'll always love you. You see—I'll be very rash, I'll even say it before we walk up the aisle—that is, if you'll have me. Penny, I'll love you until death do us part, and even then I'll still go on doing it."

Afterwards, he always signed his letters, "Yours for blackmail."

Don't you ever believe life was all honey and kisses though. There was that terrific time for both of us when he was teaching me to play poker. Terrific is just the word for it. I was trying to learn by hook or crook to please him. I'll remember that little piece of white paper until my dying day—three of a kind beat a pair, a straight beats three of a kind, a flush (all one color) beats a straight, etc. Somehow we always ended up all right in spite of my thinking a full house meant "shoot the moon." Lovers DO have luck.

That's his picture on the piano. I love that one because it shows the crinkle lines around his mouth. I think he got them from smiling so much. He could pack more fun in a couple of minutes than some people do in a lifetime. "Life's too short" was his pet expression. Such a loyal guy to me, too, even in crazy, little things. I lost my publicity job with Brauer Beer a month after we met. From then on he wouldn't order a single bottle of Brauer even though it was his favorite brand!

Oh, that little snapshot? That was taken the night of the Artist's Ball. Did Mary-Gay ever tell you about that evening? Dunc looked like the proverbial answer to a maiden's prayer in his tails. There's something so aristocratic about a tall man in his tails. Especially when they have unruly black, curly hair.

He'd brought me 18 deep red roses. Eighteen for I love you, Penny. I tucked one in my hair and wore one at the waist of my white point d'esprit. Remember, that was the season fashions were all ala Ballet Russe?

After you've spent a year here you'll recognize what kind of an evening it was—a typical Chicago winter's night of icy slush. To Dunc—a night for Elizabethan gallantry. It was at the door that my Scotch Sir Walter Raleigh picked up his lady fair to keep her from wetting two size 4's, slung her dafnitly like a sack of flour over his shoulder, proceeded to take one fatal goose step and plopped the "McAstors," formals and all, in a fluffy snowbank.

Hurt? No, you see we were in love and so we sat and laughed, never noticing our damp heaven.

The evening ended beautifully, though. A Viennese ending, Johann Strauss wrote his music just for us that night. We danced till 4 in the morning. The crystal chandeliers gleamed dim in the dawn. Everybody had gone except the orchestra — and the Blue Danube flowed down the center of the floor for us.

Listen, they're playing Strauss on the radio now. I love old waltzes. Music does funny things to me — candlelight, too. I guess all sweethearts have certain pieces they think belong to them alone.

No—I thought you understood! Didn't Mary-Gay tell you? We're not going to be married. No, never. Of course, I still love him—I always will.

Gone away? Yes, but he kept his promise. You see, he said, "Until death do us part."

(Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.)

Words Can Build Good Character, Dr. Myers Says

Progress Made In Furthering Good Citizenship in Schools

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D

There widely prevails the theory among influential educators today that words are of little or no value in the guidance of right conduct, that talk in the classroom about the thousands of ways of doing right or wrong is futile. Instead, they say we must teach right conduct and ideals in the immediate situation only.

Accordingly, a good program in character education is one in which children are practiced in the classroom at living together there as good citizens. As a result of this movement, there has been remarkable progress at furthering good citizenship at school. Yet all too often this citizenship does not function beyond the school premises. Pretty generally, the American teacher has been trained to center her efforts at character education on the immediate situation right before her.

So far so good. But why should she stop here? Having succeeded in cultivating good citizenship in the classroom, she should be at an ideal stage to lead her children to want to apply this good citizenship on the way to and from school, at home and in the home community. Don't children have memory and imagination? Must you bring the neighbor's lawn, the druggist's store, and your child's physical home in the classroom in order to teach at school right conduct in these places?

Words Important

Fortunately, some teachers, defying this theory of merely dealing with the situation here and now, do talk to their children about scores of situations and experiences away from school.

Of course, mere talk and exhortation may have no good effect at school or at home. Indeed, much of our advice at home is not only futile but actually harmful. Yet this is no proof that all words about conduct are so. Our problem is to know when and how to use words that will bring the desired results. It is a great art.

Influence of Emotion

When the child esteems us and is ready to accept what we say about conduct, see how powerful our words may be. At home or at school we can induce him choose in hundreds of situations to do right just because he believes us and esteems us.

"But I don't want a child to do anything because he esteems me and thinks I want him to do it," says a leader of the theory I am condemning. This statement ignores the influence of emotion and imagination and trusts to cold reason. But is conduct a matter of reason? Don't we act first, as a rule, and reason afterwards?

To get good citizenship just in the classroom is only to get to first base. We make the other bases, score a run home as we lead the child through his feelings and imagination to want to do right everywhere, and when no one is watching him.

A selected list of books on understanding and guiding children may be had by writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Do you think a tot should be spanked for swearing when his father swears in his presence?

A. No. If the father really cared he would be more careful of his own speech.

Lectures on Sex In College Come Up for Question

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Whenever I get a letter which begins: "What are we coming to?" I glance at the signature and see it's from the mother of three or four daughters, and am pretty sure to find a newspaper clipping which is out of the ordinary. And the clipping enclosed in this correspondent's letter dealt with something indeed out of the ordinary.

Far be it from me to add any more publicity to this already publicized case, so the name of the accused girl, admitted slayer of her new-born infants, the state college she attended, where she claims to have got her inspiration for the double infanticide, and the superior judge trying the case shall be strictly anonymous.

The facts are: The girl student pleaded guilty to a manslaughter charge and asked for probation. Her attorney read from a report of the county psychiatrist which quoted the girl as saying the speaker at a health education class gave tacit approval of trial marriages. The girl has since withdrawn her charges against the sex lectures being accountable for her delinquency, and has been put on ten years' probation.

Professors Called

Statements in the lecturer's report prompted the judge to order various professors at the college to appear for investigation of the lecture course. The college president is quoted as saying:

"I am mortally certain no member of the faculty would say such a thing as this girl has reported. Upon occasion a psychiatrist of standing is invited to address health education classes. And I'm reasonably certain that the type of men who have contributed to our health program would not presume to take advantage of the academic courtesy extended to him, to promulgate any such doctrine."

One son was born to the girl in 1940, the second last June. She admitted killing both and ascribed these murders to lectures she had heard on sex.

My correspondent who sent me the clipping about this hideous affair insists that schools and colleges have gone too far in sex discussions.

"We never heard of such a thing when I was a student," she writes, and we would have been too much embarrassed to attend such a course if it had been offered. The same is true about my four happily married daughters. And as a member of the board of trustees of a home which cares for unwed mothers, please let me say that this undue stressing of sex has, to my way of thinking, gone too far."

Puzzled by Pictures

Not long ago, your columnist attended a revival of that inimitable comedy, "Charley's Aunt." I happened to sit next to a man whose name is well-known for the service he has rendered this country. He asked:

"What on earth has happened to the sweet young girls we used to know? Not the caricatures of such we've seen this evening, but I'd be glad to accept them — simpering, unsophisticated, bustles, foolishness and all in place of those hard, brittle young things we meet today."

Honestly, I believe that any female under 30, who set herself up to be "a sweet young girl" minus sticky eyelashes, overpainted mouth, slaughter-house finger-nails and the ability to down three or four cocktails, and avoid smoking-room stories, would get a rush from all the weary "young dogs" who write me they're so tired of the "slack and shorts set." The new role is at least worth trying.

'Straw Hat' Circuit Hits Jackpot

Big names lure record throngs to nation's summer drama circuit.

By HERMAN ALLEN
(AP) Feature Serivce Writer

NEW YORK—The "straw hat" eater season now booming to a ke is the most successful since le groups of daring souls started tting chairs into haymows ten ars ago.

Some large and some small, the mmer playhouses are making re money than ever before, and ir managers believe they're unering more Broadway material, man and dramatic.

Managers of some of the larger the 70 or 80 theaters that dot e northern Atlantic seaboards have rmed the Summer Stock Managers sociation. It is a clearing house information on bookings, actors' hedules, all sorts of common probms. John C. Wildberg, SSMA secary, has had more opportunity an anyone else to observe how ngs are going out on the "circuit."

Now It's Big Business

"One thing I'm sure of," said ldberg, "that this is without quesn the most successful year finanly the summer theaters have r known. I know of at least a en that will clear $5,000 and four five that will clear $10,000. One two others may make as much as ,000.

"Hollywood is waking up to us.

"Generally speaking, there are two sses of summer theaters: big and le ones.

The little theaters, often seating no more than 300 persons, couldn't exist on boxoffice intake if they packed the house every night. They need the support of wealthy sponsors who contribute because they are interested in the future of the theater —in the training of young actors.

The big theaters have their beneficial side, too.

"Summer has always been a slack time for actors," Wildberg explained. "The Summer theater is a bridge from Broadway season to Broadway season. Not only does it keep the money coming in, but it keeps him in direct touch with the theater and keeps him in form for the next winter."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Loved and Lost

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We graduated from the same class in high school and then went together for two years after that, when he was sent to another city to open a new office for his firm. He wanted me to marry him so we could go away together, but I didn't think I cared enough for him, and couldn't think of leaving my parents.

We corresponded for a while, but gradually drifted apart, and now after two years I hear he's engaged to someone else, and it has nearly killed me, for I now realize my mistake and know I'll never love anyone else. He has told friends that he could never forget me. Do you think there's still a chance for me?

TROUBLED

I get many letters like this one from young people who never realized the girl or man they have left dangling for years was the right one until someone else made the same decision. I wonder if they really do care, or if these eleventh hour discoveries of genuine love are not dismay at losing something they have grown to regard a possession.

In this case the girl waited four years to discover she loves the man enough to want to marry him, and then only upon hearing he's engaged to someone else. The only thing to do is face it and make up your mind to become interested in someone else.

Should Get Facts

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 21 years old and very much in love with a young man of 24. Mother doesn't say anything about him, but my father dislikes him and calls him all kinds of ugly names. This young man was married once and says he's divorced. But my dad doesn't believe him.

We've been secretly engaged for a short time and he gave me a very beautiful diamond ring. I know about his former marriage, but it doesn't make any difference to me. I love him. Don't you think I'm old enough to make my own choice? After all, I'm the one who will live with him and not my father.

"STELLA."

Twenty-four is pretty young for a man to have been married and divorced. Why don't you find out if this divorce was granted, if it is absolutely legal, if there are children and if he has to pay alimony to his former wife. Ask in what state the divorce was granted. Don't continue to fall deeper in love by "blind reckoning." A girl of your age in love for the first time frequently makes mistakes which cannot be rectified except at great cost and long periods of time. Tell your father that you agree to let him to the extent of discovering more about this divorce and the marriage.

Canadians Enter Third War Year With High Morale on Home Front

Hulls take shape under the hands of expert shipbuilders

C. D. Howe, Canada's minister of munitions and supply, watches Shirley Patterson demonstrate a high-precision spectrometer

Canadian soldiers man a howitzer on an artillery range

By HORACE D. CRAWFORD
Central Press Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 25 — Canada's entry into its third year of war is marked by high morale and unprecedented production on the home front.

A special issue of the Canada Gazette, publication of official documents, appeared at noon, Sept. 10, 1939, carrying a proclamation "declaring that a state of war with the German Reich exists and has existed in Canada as and from the tenth day of September, 1939."

Canada then was an unarmed democracy. Its army was small. Its navy so tiny that Canadians smiled derisively when you mentioned it. The Royal Canadian Air Force then was not particularly impressive.

King George VI had visited Ottawa less than four months earlier and had dedicated Canada's national memorial to the first World war. Canadians were neither prepared nor in the mood for war.

First War Declaration

Nevertheless, their statesmen voted to fight Hitlerism. That was the first time in history that Canada had made its own declaration of war. Since then the dominion has been the only active belligerent in the western hemisphere.

Conditions are greatly changed in Canada in this third year of war.

The pre-war navy of 13 ships and a total personnel of 2,000 men has grown to more than 200 ships and 20,000 men, while plans are underway to make a navy of 400 ships and 27,000 men by March, 1942.

That pre-war army of 4,500 regulars and a militia of 55,000 men has increased to an active army of more than 220,000 volunteers and a reserve army of an additional 170,000 men for home defense.

That pre-war air force has undergone a 12-fold increase and today numbers about 60,000 men, while the 90 schools of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan are nearly complete, eight months ahead of schedule, and prepared to turn out from 20,000 to 30,000 trained men annually as long as the war lasts.

100,000 Overseas

Canadians like to remind Americans that more than 100,000 of their fighting men are already overseas—a number that in terms of United States population would exceed 1,000,000 men overseas. Additional divisions and reinforcements are under rigorous training for overseas service.

Casualties of Canadian soldiers, airmen and sailors numbered more than 1,200 as the second war year closed.

"Production is still the key to victory," Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden recently asserted at warbattered Coventry. Canadians appear to be solidly of that same belief. Portuguese is the order of the day across the dominion.

Factories are producing munitions and other war materials. Farmers are producing good for fighting men. Skilled workers and scientists are in demand to improve the efficiency of production.

Production is a foremost concern of the joint economic committees recently appointed by Presidents Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King to co-ordinate the wartime output of Canadian and United States industrial plants.

Canadian exports to Great Britain increased 45 per cent during the second fiscal year of war over those of the first year. Canadian goods exported during the present fiscal year are expected to reach a value of about $1,000,000,000.

Canadian factories are producing many types of guns, shells, munitions, airplanes, corvettes, minesweepers, small boats, mechanized transports and universal carriers.

Farmers are producing wheat, bacon, cheese, eggs and other vital foods needed by Britain.

Canadian women are working in numerous factories. Women's auxiliaries have been formed in the army and air force. Women have been found particularly efficient in research laboratories and other war work suited to their skills.

Merchant shipbuilding is undergoing a vast expansion as Canada prepares for a war of any length. More than 20,000 workers in 62 Canadian shipyards are engaged in this shipbuilding program that involves expenditures of some $320,000,000.

Contracts awarded by the department of munitions and supply already exceed $2,000,000,000, including commitments for plant expansion and equipment.

Canadians are now spending about 40 per cent of their national income on war. Canada today is an armed democracy. Its armed forces are constantly expanding. Its industrial production continues to grow in output and efficiency.

Who will win the Battle of the Atlantic? Will war explode across waters of the Pacific? Will Russia fall, bringing Nazi domination to Bering strait waters bordering Alaska?

Time alone can answer these questions.

Canadians have fortified their coasts and strategic harbors. They have built air bases between the United States and Alaska. Their troops are guarding Newfoundland and the West Indies, as well as Britain. Canadian troops were in Iceland a year before the Americans arrived.

Americans working for the defense of North American democracy and the perpetration of freedom in the world find in the Canadians stalwart allies.

"A Store Has Little Future If It Cannot Be Proud Of Its Past"

George A. Wolf

WOLF'S
Are Proud of Their Record

Herbert T. Wolf

To hope for a prosperous future any store must look back up on a healthy past. Upon a wholesome foundation, a great store can continue to grow, but, stores are what men make them, what men demand they shall be. Back in 1902 Charles E. Wolf founded the Wolf Furniture Company. From that thirty-nine years ago, when the first customer walked into our store, patrons have found that they could depend upon Wolf's for honesty, truthfulness and quality.

The Cumberland store and nine other Wolf stores are fitting tributes to the founders memory. We are justly proud of our past and the fine business principles practiced during the founders lifetime. They have formed the solid foundation upon which we, his successors, build.

The confidence of the patrons of the Wolf Furniture Companies, the one thing we prize above everything else.

HERBERT T. WOLF

If Founder's Week were not an annual event on our calendar—if it were not always our custom to plan and prepare for it months ahead—we would, undoubtedly have faced unsurmountable difficulties in providing the extraordinary values we are now offering our customers during this great week-long event.

But we completed most of our preparations for Founder's Week months ago . . . We filled our Founder's Week needs with merchandise that is extremely difficult to get, regardless of price . . . We protected our values for Founder's Week . . . Those far sighted patrons who have an eye on world events and on the future, will realize that NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY . . .

Tom Murtha
Manager, Cumberland Store

We searched the market for fine merchandise that we could bring you at savings that couldn't help but demand BUYERS ATTENTION . . . We bought all we could lay our hands on . . . Furniture, rugs, homefurnishings of all kinds, radios, washers, refrigerators, etc. . . . In fact we bought the finest, the newest . . . We bought the styles and designs you'll want for your home . . . and we bought them at savings . . . And now we're offering them to our patrons, in tribute to the Founder of the great Wolf Organization at savings that are really amazing . . .

Come in . . . See our store jammed with values . . . Values we're proud of . . . Are proud to offer our patrons . . . Values that make us urge "Founder's Week is the TIME TO BUY" . . .

WOLF'S CUMBERLAND STORE IS YOUR STORE . . . DEDICATED TO SERVICE AND VALUES!

Two Men Are Held for Breaking Into Keyser Department Store

KEYSER, W. Va., Sept. 25—John Newhouse and William Fawley, Keyser, were arrested about midnight last night after they allegedly broke a sheet of plate glass in a door of the Coffman-Fisher company store on the corner of Main and Armstrong streets here.

The men were taken into custody by Chief of City Police James E. Leatherman and State Police Trooper R. R. Karickhoff after Frank Sagel, Sharpless street, reported hearing the sound of breaking glass and saw Newhouse and Fawley standing in the Main street doorway of the store as he was passing.

Officers said a brake key for railroad cars, was used to smash the glass. The policemen said that a charge of "destruction of property" was probably all that could be brought against Newhouse. Fawley, released from the Mineral county jail yesterday morning after serving a sentence for drunkenness, was returned to the prison today for a thirty-day term imposed by Justice of the Peace C. C. Compton on a like charge.

Newhouse was free under at least two bonds when he was arrested last night. He was taken into custody a few weeks ago on a charge of breaking and entering the American Legion club rooms, Main and Mozelle streets, and a short time later arrested on a charge of burglarizing the Prichard Corporation store, Main and Armstrong streets. He posted bond and was freed in each case. Local officers also said they understood Newhouse was out on bond from Washington county, Md., court on a charge of breaking and entering a garage. Indictments have been returned against Newhouse on the local breaking and entering charges, and he is scheduled to stand trial at the October term of circuit court here.

Camouflaged Carrier Pigeons Are Developed For Army Use with the Aid of School Boys

By ANDREW R. BOONE
Central Press Correspondent

ONTARIO, Cal., Sept. 18.—Whatever secrets Hitler's armies may be hiding, two-score boys in this vicinity offer ten-two-and-even the Germans can't match their invisible birds.

Invisible is, of course, a slight misnomer. Nearly invisible would fit their battle birds better.

These 40 boys, students at Chaffey Union high school here, plus another 50 or so former students have with the aid of a teacher wrought a notable achievement in birddom. They have developed several strains of camouflaged pigeons for use by Uncle Sam's army when other means of communication fail.

Of course, most of the credit goes to their teacher, Capt. Ray R. Delhauer.

Job Inherited

Some nine years after World War I, Delhauer inherited the job of demobilizing the army's pigeon service. Thousands of birds were passed along to other civilian fanciers, but this man brought home to Ontario 55 pairs of trained veterans.

Many of those historic 55 pairs were descendants of famous birds; a son of Old Mocker, descendants of the Bovyns which once carried messages across the Swiss Alps, even a few sturdy Germans captured in France.

Delhauer was satisfied with their performance. He sought other characteristics.

Many Killed

"Too many pigeons were killed by enemy sharpshooters on rising from the front lines," he says. "I wanted to camouflage them."

He sought blue and rust and white and gray and combinations of those colors. He passed out pigeons to his students, who took them home to lofts scattered amongst orange groves nearby. They returned the young to school and when these grew up, they crossed colors again.

Result is, today you might see zipping over California on homing flights from distant places all sorts of colors. The blue-rust is nearly invisible over one sort of terrain, the mottled can scarcely be seen over an embattled city. He's got a half-dozen color mixtures, each particularly useful against a certain color background.

But the captain has not stopped here. Recently he devised a new way for pigeons to carry messages—in capsules carried in the crop. Not ordinary gelatin containers, but new ones which will not be absorbed.

Can't Use Radio

Again—suppose a friendly bomber were reconnoitering over enemy territory and the pilot wished to send a message to headquarters. He dare not radio but slips a container into a pigeon's crop, places the pigeon in an ice-cream-like carton, and tosses the bird out into the slip stream.

That's Captain Delhauer's latest wrinkle, discovered while launching pigeons from airplanes at March field to test their visibility from the air. Oh, yes; a spring opens the container, freeing the pigeon after it has safely fallen away from the plane.

The boys in Delhauer's classes take inordinate pride in their breeding experiments. They feel they have given Uncle Sam something that may save a battalion some day. They rightfully take credit for an important job, started long before any of them ever heard of a defense program for the nation.

Judge Frees Boy Held in Hospital For Unpaid Bill

O'Dunne Grants Plea of Child's Father in Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Sept 25 (AP)—Judge Eugene O'Dunne today ordered a three-year-old child released from the Maryland General Hospital where the boy's father said, he was being held for failure to pay $24 hospital bill.

Hospitals, the judge told Stewart B. Crawford, hospital general superintendent, make a "fundamental mistake" in thinking "they have a lien on the boy for an amount due civilly."

Within an hour after Carl Jones, the father, made his complaint, Judge O'Dunne had the child, Dale, brought to court and released under Habeas Corpus proceedings.

Crawford admitted in court telling Jones that he would swear out a warrant for Jones's arrest for failing to meet the debt if Jones took the boy home.

Similar to Blackmail

Judge O'Dunne declared that threat "crossed the line of blackmail," and termed it "a subterfuge" to frighten a person into paying a bill.

Jones testified that he went to the hospital Sunday to get his son, admitted Sept. 19 for observation of a head injury. Unable to pay the bill, he was told to return Monday. On Monday, Crawford first advised him to arrange a loan, and then said the boy could be taken home, but if he was, a warrant for Jones's arrest would follow.

Wife Refused Free Care

Crawford testified Mrs. Jones, when the child was brought to the hospital, had signed a statement that she was financially able to pay for treatment, and had refused a suggestion to seek free medical care.

Jones, a railroad fireman, told the court he was now able to pay the bill, but did not have the money earlier this week.

Ohio Storm Damage Runs into Thousands

SANDUSKY, O., Sept. 25 (AP)—Ohio counted property and crop losses in the hundreds of thousands of dollars tonight after a gale of near-hurricane proportions swept the state, causing at least one death and injuring scores of persons.

Few sections escaped the high winds, aftermath of a storm over the western planes. The wind reached a velocity of seventy miles an hour here. A falling tree killed John Buswell, 73, a west Jefferson farmer.

Firemen were stymied in efforts to combat blazes which broke out during the storm.

Herman Mantell, Ohio Apple Association president, estimated damage to the lake county apple crop at $100,000. Seneca county reported a ninety per cent apple loss and $50,000 damage to hay and forage crops.

J. Leroy Boyer Granted Parole

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 25 (AP)—J. Leroy Boyer, 47, former chief accountant clerk at the state penal farm, was among six convicts granted paroles late today by Governor O'Conor.

Boyer had only nine months to serve.

O'Conor said:

"Boyer has had no previous conflicts with the law and has made himself amenable to the discipline of the penitentiary where he has worked efficiently as an inmate clerk. The source of the prisoners' difficulty was his inability to adjust his domestic affairs."

Report Shortage of 1,500 Tank Cars

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP)—A shortage of 1,500 railroad tank cars below the present requirements of the petroleum industry was reported today in oil company circles.

The shortage, it was said, was seriously hampering supply of gasoline and other petroleum needs to both the east and west coasts and to the south.

Railroads were said to be expediting oil shipments in an effort to relieve the situation. The Pennsylvania railroad, for instance, is moving about 500 tank cars a day in three solid trains from pipe line terminals in Ohio to eastern refineries.

Oil experts said the tank car shortage indicated a huge rise in rail transportation of oil since J. J. Pelley, president of the American Association of Railroads, stated a few weeks ago that 20,000 tank cars were available to carry oil from the southwest to eastern refineries.

With several hundred filling stations in the east already empty of gasoline, despite the 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. curfew on gasoline sales, the oil men accepted the report of tank car shortage as a grave matter.

Second "Spy" Radio Station Reported

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP)—The government today introduced testimony that a second "spy" radio transmitting set was operated near New York to give Germany information.

The first radio, discussed during three weeks of the trial of sixteen defendants on charges of espionage conspiracy, was established and operated by William G. Sebold, a counter-espionage agent. It sent and received more than 500 messages to and from a German Gestapo station in Hamburg.

The government contends that several other defendants, including Axel Wheeler-Hill and Joseph Klein, operated the second station and reported, among other things, ship movements in and out of New York harbor.

Roscoe Ammon, engineer and radio salesman, testified that in July, 1940, Klein bought radio equipment for broadcasting outside both commercial and amateur bands and, according to Klein's specifications, "with a range of 3,000 miles."

Edgar Stover, director of Y. M. C. A. schools, testified that Wheeler-Hill had enrolled in a radio code class.

Infantile Paralysis Situation Improving

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25 (AP)—Dr. C. H. Halliday, state health department epidemiologist, said today he believed the incident of poliomyelitis now definitely was on the downgrade in Maryland.

"That is as it should be at this time of the year," he declared, adding, "August usually is the peak month."

Three new cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the department today. Of them, two were in Baltimore city—on a child of in Baltimore city—one a child of five—and the third was a 24-year-old man in Prince George's county.

These brought the total of polio cases reported in Maryland during the year to 183—100 in the counties and eighty-three in Baltimore. This is the highest total since 1928 when 289 cases were involved. Last time the disease hit more than 100 Marylanders was in 1935 with 107 stricken.

Ickes Has Plan To Increase Output Of Aviation Gas

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP) — In a move to assure adequate fuel for the fighting planes of the United States, Britain and Russia, the administration, it was disclosed today, is making plans for a three-fold increase in American production of aviation gasoline.

Saying that a serious shortage of aviation fuel threatened, Secretary of the Interior Ickes said he and Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, were drafting a program calling for construction of fifty new refining plants for 100 octane gasoline. He estimated the plants would cost $150,000,000.

The defense petroleum coordinator told his press conference that the navy recently had gone into the market for 600,000 barrels of aviation gasoline for Lend-Lease purposes, but had failed to receive bids.

Italy Reoccupies Zone in Croatia

ROME, Sept. 25 (AP)—Coincident with word that 1,500,000 Serbs still oppose the Axis-sponsored regime in Croatia—thousands of them roaming in guerrilla bands with torch, bomb and machine-gun—Italy proclaimed today she had secured her Adriatic flank by reoccupation of a Croatian demilitarized zone.

The commander of Italy's second army, General Vittorio Ambrosio, reporting to Premier Mussolini, said that the area was reoccupied without "any incidents worthy of notice." The reoccupation was ordered in August.

The announcement appeared on the same day as a dispatch in the newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma telling of a no-quarter fight against Serb rebels. Croatia was erected from the ruins of shattered Yugoslavia.

Md. Postoffice Is Looted by Yeggs

LUTHERVILLE, Md., Sept. 25 (AP)—Robbers who apperently waited for a freight train to muffle the sound of a dynamite explosion blew the safe of the Lutherville postoffice today and made off with $300 in cash and $700 in stamps.

Postal officials said a number of defense bonds also were missing.

The robbery was discovered at 3:45 a. m. by Charles Chambers, a carrier, reporting for duty. The front door had been jimmied open.

Neighbors said they heard no explosion, and police said the robbers apparently timed the blast with passage of a freight train through town at 12:30 a. m.

Police reported the combination was chiseled off the safe and dynamite inserted in a hole made by chisels. A dynamite cap was found on the floor, along with papers, from the safe.

Mrs. Margaret M. Williams, temporary postmaster, said serial numbers of the missing bonds were being checked. Registered letters and money orders apparently had not been touched, she added.

Five Army Fliers Escape Crash Death

LANGLEY FIELD, Va., Sept. 25 (AP)—Five army fliers escaped unhurt today in the takeoff crash of a B-26 medium bomber, which burst into flames after skidding along the edge of the field for several hundred feet.

Air base officers said the plane had risen only fifty to seventy-five feet when it plummeted to earth. The crew tumbled out as it slid along the soft ground and were reported to have escaped injury.

The B-26 is a twin-motored Martin bomber. The fliers were taking off for a routine training flight.

Bishop Candler Dies at Age 84

ATLANTA, Sept. 25 (AP) — Bishop Warren Akin Candler, 84-year-old Patriarch of Southern Methodism, died today and thus ended a career that saw him rise from a junior circuit rider to acclaim as evangelical titan of a passing Southern era.

He was active in the work of his church for more than half a century, expounding his beliefs in widely-quoted phrases, defending them against critics with sharp repartee and punctuating argument with humor in rural vernacular.

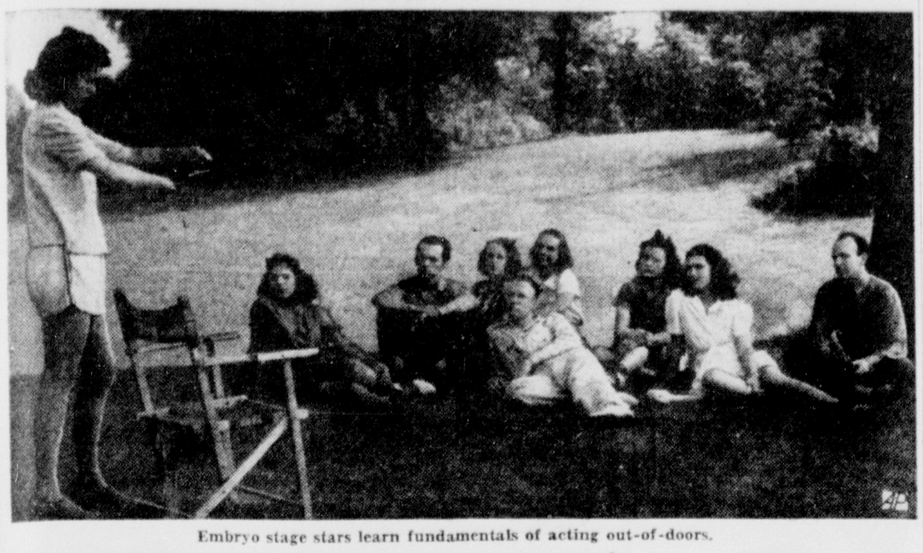
It's a Long, Long Way to Broadway



Embryo stage stars learn fundamentals of acting out-of-doors.

By HERMAN ALLEN
AP Feature Service Writer

SUFFERN, N. Y.—Blonde Jean Muir looked at the sky.

"Oh, dear," she said, "it's starting to rain. You have no idea what it means when you're in the summer theater business and it starts to rain at a quarter to seven. People just stay home."

Miss Muir, veteran of Broadway and Hollywood, is producer at the County Theater, one of the "little" summer playhouses. Like most of the 70 or 80 "straw hat" theaters in the north Atlantic region, Suffern is a practical school for would-be young actors.

Sanford Meisner, director and Miss Muir's partner, rounded up the "little" theater school of thought this way:

"The big business summer theater needs big names to keep it going. The result is that there is little place for untrained youngsters.

"While, of course, we here must make expenses to keep going and to carry out the original purpose of the summer theater, we think we can meet both objectives by bringing in well known stars to attract the customers and using apprentices and minor featured players for the rest of the jobs."

It had stopped raining now, and Miss Muir wa smiling again.

Apprentices Do All Jobs

"That's right," she said. "I'm convinced that the apprentice system, as we use it, is the only way to turn out really well-rounded actors. These young people go to work first at painting scenery, searching the countryside for props, handling the sets and lights, even sweeping the stage. Meanwhile we give them small supporting roles, and they are going to classes."

Out of the hard work and the "bull sessions" the little theater operators believe they are forging tomorrow's Broadway — perhaps more than that, an American theater that will spread to every crossroads of the land. A Suffern student from Wisconsin is talking about trying to start a state-wide theater movement out there. A girl from Kentucky wants to do the same thing for her home state.

Fall Showings Scheduled

Another thing the summer theaters are doing is to cut down on expensive road tryouts of plays.

Opinion is that this summer has uncovered more Broadway-caliber shows than any previous year. Among scheduled openings of plays which had summer tryouts are "Two-Story House," a mystery comedy by Parker Fennelly, "Walk Into My Parlor," by Alexander Greendale, and "Lottie Dundass," by Enid Bagnold, which summered at Santa Barbara, Calif.

W. Va. Man Is Member Of Flying Sergeant's Graduating Class

DAVIS, W. Va., Sept. 25—Bruce L. Hatton, Davis, W. Hutton a member of the 42-C class, completed his solo flight test September 16 at Muskogee, Okla., where he has been stationed since August 16.

What To Wear to a Square Dance

Gold wool jersey free-swinging skirt with a removable checked weskit. Its square-dance simplicity, with shoes tied on.

By The AP Feature Service

Homespun square-dancing is sweeping the country! Simplicity is America's fashion in pastimes, as in everything these days. Grange halls, college gyms, the Joneses' play-room—all resound to the stomp of the modern "caller" with his streamlined versions of the pioneer quadrains: "First the oyster, then the clam, open up the sardine can."

We give you herewith our recipe for maximum fun in square-dancing:

To one prospective dancer add:

One dress—full of skirt, snug of bodice.

One woolen hug-me-tight shawl—for whimsy and warmth between dances.

One pair flat-heeled, sturdy-soled shoes that won't fly off when your partner swings you off your feet.

Two bright cotton or wool stockings.

One gadget to keep your hair out of your partner's face—flip Dutch cap of the dress fabric, or earmuffs made of woolen loops anchored on a bicycle clip.

Mix well.

Then add:

One lively fiddler who knows "Turkey in the Straw."

One caller who knows the dance figures and can improvise calls without respect to persons, parsing or poetic license.

One brawny partner with a sense of rhythm.

"Swing your partners—and all promenade!"

Old-Fashioned Cake Gives Way to Macaroni

OMAHA, Sept. 25 (AP)—Loneliest spot at the Omaha food show was a booth showing the old-fashioned way to bake a cake. A few wistful husbands paused there.

But the women were banked three deep around a booth where a macaroni dinner with all the food values for a meal was being demonstrated—no fuss, no fidget, just open and heat.

In England old cars are converted into tractors and put to work on wartime farms.

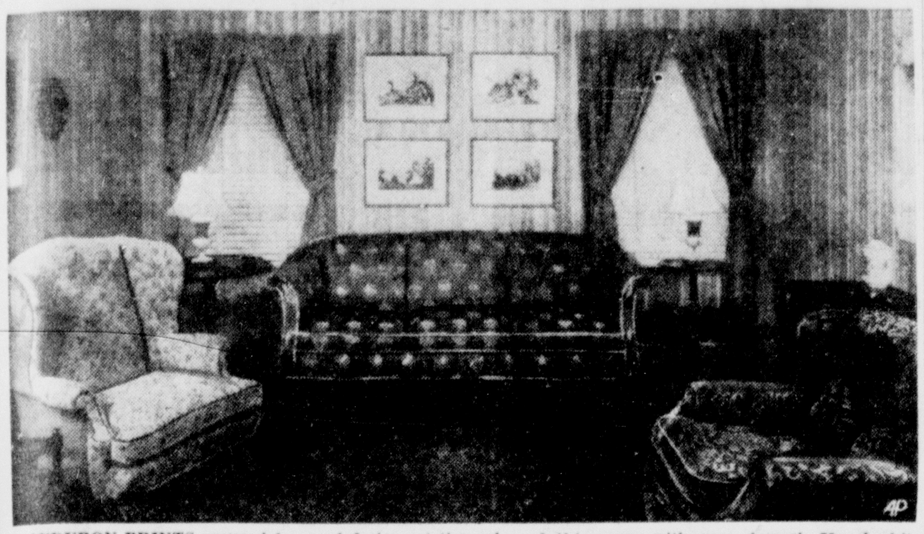
Fall Decorating Uses Simplicity, Color



AUDUBON PRINTS grouped for good design set the color of this room with rose damask Hepplewhite sofa, honey-gold wine chair and royal blue rattine lounge chair. China lamps have silk shades. Draperies are gold damask and picture frames are gold.

By MARGARET KERNODLE
AP Feature Service Writer

If moving to a new apartment or fall cleaning has you in the mood for new furnishings, here are some furniture facts for fall, 1941.

Four furniture fashions come forward: American Federal, Pennsylvania Dutch, Chinese influence and Modern—manufacturers call it mature modern.

These are not pushing other periods out but rather are making re-decoration or additional decoration simpler because they are easy to combine with what you have.

Federal For Patriotic Colors

American Federal fosters quilts and embroidered fabrics, framed mirrors, patriotic colors or pale pastels for walls, designs of fruits, acanthus leaves, star and eagle, tables with tripod base, scenic wallpaper, colonial cabinets.

Pennsylvania Dutch dotes on bright decorations with fruits, tulips, hearts, angels, stars for hanging shelves, chairs, cupboards; harps on homey harmonizing of gay with a primitively plain quality to things like glassware. It's good with maple.

Chinese Helps Mahogany

Chinese chic comes into rooms decorated to play up traditional mahogany, and is especially strong in accessories such as trays, tea caddies, matting for floor coverings, wall hanging or table mats (have you tried tinting them?). These go with traditional or modern mahogany, even unit pieces.

Modern moves in with periods like English Provincial and Early American, especially for the home that you must find furniture for in a hurry, for the country cottage and the budget apartment. Some stores show parades of Persian colors with it, much American Indian craft. The effect is expected to be a homespun cosiness.

Don't forget the government is asking furniture folk for restricted types and simplified designs. Plan the bulk of your furnishings along plain lines.

Asks Labor To Aid Cause of Allies

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP)—An appeal to "every organized worker in the land" to contribute one hour's pay to workers in Great Britain and other countries engaged in the fight against the Axis powers was made here by AFL Vice-President Matthew Woll, chairman of the American Labor Committee to Aid British Labor.

In a communication to all central labor bodies and city Aid British labor committees, Woll noted the committee's policy had been broadened to aid labor in other countries opposed to the Axis, outside Britain.

A study by playing card manufacturers showed that rummy is the best-known card game in American homes, solitaire next and contract bridge third.

The Prophet Mohammed is said to have constantly worn a carnelian, declaring all desires would be gratified to the wearer of such a gem.

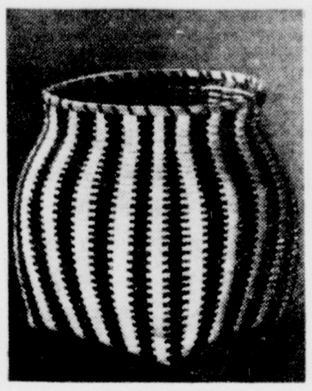
The Danzig merchant Fahrenheit, who invented the thermometer, was a business failure.

Here's How To Decorate a College Room

AP Feature Service

CAN THIS BE COLLEGE? The girls are trying out their week-end leisure togs—or perhaps getting into the mood for the first formal. Note what they have done to this room at Stephens College (Columbia, Mo.) to end the accusation that college rooms are always either sloppy or starkly practical. Featured are sturdy cotton stripe for spread and drapes, combined with dainty, sheer glass curtains.

And Here Are Some Useful Gifts



A WASTE BASKET in traditional Indian tribal pattern puts color and design into a room and may hold knitting or conceal food, as well as papers.

A GOOD, inexpensive lamp rates high. Here's one in plastic and metal which is glareless, focussed upon the study matter and takes up little space.

A GAY taffeta bag in stripes, plaids or checks. Its a carry-all for football and house party jaunts and a small slip-in bag serves for formal affairs.

The carnelian stone, worn as a ring, was believed to prevent bleeding at the nose. Ancient peoples also used the stone with a carved intaglio for ornamental wear, believing that it would cure throat infections and still angry passions.

Many salesmen are following a new idea of tipping with Defense Savings Stamps.

Dr. Parrish's Reducing Plan makes reducing a pleasure. A pleasure because it allows you to EAT PLENTY, requires no exercises. Harmless, too, because it calls for no reducing drugs, no loss of vitality.
Here is Dr. Parrish's Reducing Plan EXACTLY as given by him over the air to millions: For lunch take 2 teaspoonsful of Cal-Par in a glass of fruit juice, or any beverage. Take nothing else for lunch except a cup of coffee if desired. For breakfast and dinner EAT AS YOU USUALLY DO. Don't cut out fatty, starchy foods—just cut down on them. Try Dr. Parrish's Reducing Plan for one week. You and your friends will be amazed at the vast improvement in your figure. Most overweight cases should be helped by Dr. Parrish's Plan.
Cal-Par is not a reducing drug. It is a special purpose food supplying calcium, iron, phosphorous, and Vitamin D. Get a can today, plain or chocolate flavor. Cal-Par costs only about 3c a day to use.
Money back if not satisfied—FREE: With your first purchase of Cal-Par, a copy of Dr. Parrish's 7-Day Reducing Plan, a 48-page book which includes a personal talk on reducing by Dr. Parrish.

A. M. Beetchenon, Newark, N. J., writes: "Before using Orotune Ear Drops, I was so deafened that I could not hear the clock tick. After using Orotune, I can now hear the clock tick with both ears." Thousands now hard-of-hearing would hear clearly and distinctly again, and also get relief from buzzing, ringing head noises, clogged up feeling in ears, if impacted wax that blocks ear canals and presses on sensitive eardrums was removed. Try Orotune Ear Drops as directed for this purpose. They are safe and contain an ingredient recommended by United States Public Health Service.

Scene Taken From York's Life

Gary Cooper was about as close to heaven as it's possible to get on a movie sound stage when he played a scene depicting a decision that made history.

The scene was for "Sergeant York," now at the Strand theater, and Cooper sat on the topmost crag of a man made mountain on a Warner Bros. studio set. There was a spiritual quality to the scene that made the eerie perch highly appropriate. Alvin York was searching his soul, torn between religious convictions and love of country.

At last his eyes dropped to the Bible in his hands. He opened the book to a passage. Then, haltingly, he real aloud, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

Slowly, the tortured look of indecision in his face changed to one of firm resolve. Still holding the Bible he rose and his full height was outlined against the brightening sky.

On just such a mountain crag as that on which Cooper sat, York kept an all night vigil, and with the coming of the sunrise reached his decision. It was a decision that gave America her greatest soldier hero of the first World war expeditionary force.

New Starrett Hit Opens at Garden

Bullets blaze a trail of rhythm and thrills in Columbia's "Thundering Frontier," starring Charles Starrett and opening today at the Garden theater. Featuring Iris Meredith in the romantic lead and the singing Sons of the Pioneers in supporting roles, the film tells the story of Starrett's desperate efforts to prevent a gang of outlaws from stopping construction of the first telegraph lines out West.

Lucky John Hubbard! He romances two lovelies, Marjorie Weaver and Cobina Wright, Jr., in "Murder Among Friends," which opens today at the Garden theater, promising fine entertainment for every movie-goer.

Baby Weems Stars in "The Reluctant Dragon"

One of the outstanding stars of Walt Disney's newest full length production "The Reluctant Dragon" starting today at the Liberty is a little blue eyed yellow haired baby named Weems—"Baby Weems."

"The Reluctant Dragon" itself is a "live action" comedy set within the walls of the Disney plant itself, with Robert Benchley playing himself.

One of the fellows, grabbing a pointer, mounts a step ladder and starts narrating the story of "Baby Weems." From that point on, the screen audience witnessing this part of "The Reluctant Dragon" film see "Baby, Weems" through Benchley's eyes.

"Baby Weems," is the story of a little son born to a couple of average people, who startles the world by talking soon after his birth. His talents are presented in a continuity of dynamic and hilarious scenes.

Suppressed Desire Is Theme of Maryland Film

If you've ever wondered what a suppressed desire looks like, you'll find out when you see "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," starring Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman and Lana Turner at the Maryland theater.

Foreign films have frequently adopted the surrealist method to depict mental processes on the screen, but the method was rarely used in America prior to "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

During the transformation from the stable Dr. Jekyll to the sadistic Mr. Hyde, Director Fleming has utilized the montage to illustrate the mental transition. The human eye, horses, tigers, flowers and beautiful girls are all tossed together in a manner heretofore only seen in surrealist paintings.

According to Carl Schneider, an official of the Art Directors Club of New York, "These montages are the most effective use of surrealism in any film to date."

Autry Film Now At Embassy Theater

"Sunset in Wyoming," which is the newest of Gene Autry's Republic musical westerns, is now appearing at the Embassy theater.

Gene as a youthful rancher in a valley facing flood devastation is adopted by the Wentworth Lumber Company.

Unable to make much headway with the lumber camp foreman, Gene and his pal, Frog Millhouse—which role is always played by Smiley Burnette—go straight to the owner of the lumber company, old Asa Wentworth, hoping to appeal to his sense of justice to preserve the ranches that lie between the lumber properties on the top of Mount Warner.

Maris Wrixon is cast in the feminine lead, and the supporting cast includes George Cleveland as old Asa, Robert Kent as Drew, and Dick Elliott.

MICKEY COMES OF AGE

Sitting behind an enormous birthday cake, Mickey Rooney, America's No. 1 juvenile actor, receives a congratulatory kiss from actress Judy Garland as he celebrates his birthday in Hollywood. It was a great day for Mickey. He attained his majority.

STAGE STARS WED

Betsy Blair, 17, who stepped from the chorus of a Broadway musical comedy to a starring role in "The Beautiful People," leaves St. John the Evangelist Catholic church, Philadelphia, with her bridegroom, Gene Kelly, 27, recent star of the comedy, "Pal Joey."

Members of independent war bands are known as guerrillas.

The Vikings and Saxons considered the raven a sacred bird and adorned their helmets with its wings.

The razorshell, a clam of eastern United States, resembles the blade of a straight-edge razor.

DR. JEKYLL'S AFFIANCED

Lana Turner

Dr. Jekyll's affianced is Beatrix (Lana Turner), daughter of a venerable medical colleague who disputes his theories in the filmization "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," currently appearing at the Maryland theater.

Stocks Break Sharply, but Losses Are Partly Regained before Close

Morgenthau's Plans for Profit Ceiling Alarms Traders

By BERNARD S. O'HARA

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP)—Late support steadied the stock market today after one of the sharpest breaks of the year blamed mainly on the revival of tax fears.

Secretary Morgenthau's disclosure the treasury was working on a bill which would put a ceiling over corporate profits of about six per cent on invested capital touched off heavy unloading in virtually all industrial share departments and losses ranged from one to more than five points at the worst.

Prices stiffened substantially in the final half hour on Washington advices that the proposed measure might meet strong opposition in Congress.

1,169,090 Shares Sold

Dealings, fast on the unloading drive, slowed appreciably as the belated recovery shift got under way. Transfers of 1,169,090 shares, however were the largest since July 22 and compared with 551,710 the day before.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks emerged with a net loss of .5 of a point at 43, biggest single decline since April 18.

Among shares registering new lows for the year were Bethlehem Steel, which cut an early sizable loss to ¾; Jones & Laughlin, Consolidated Edison and Public Service of N. J.

Prominent losers included U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Crucible, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, Consolidate Aircraft, Lockheed, Wright-Aeronautical, Kennecott, du Pont, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, Philip Morris, U. S. Gypsum, Pepsi-Cola and N. Y. Shipbuilding.

Curb Issues Decline

In a shaky curb Aluminum of America dropped 5, Singer Mfg. 6¾, Heyden Chemical 4½ and Universal Pictures 3. Lesser declines were shown for Phoenix securities, Beech Aircraft, Gulf Oil, Brewster Aero, Humble Oil and Lake Shore. American gas improved. Turnover here approximated 225,000 shares versus 130,000 Wednesday.

The bond market followed the line of least resistance to lower levels as the financial community pondered treasury advocacy of drastic limitation on corporate profits.

While selling at all times was orderly and stout resistance was displayed by numerous individual issues, the day's turnover added up to $7,126,250, par value, the largest in a week, and compared with $5,909,700 on Wednesday.

U. S. governments retained the even disposition on Wednesday and the majority of active issues were slightly ahead on both the stock exchange and over the counter.

PAYROLL PADDING CASES CONTINUED UNTIL JANUARY

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 25 (AP)—The four persons still facing grand larceny charges in the legislative payroll padding cases obtained a postponement of their trials today to the January term of Kanawha County Intermediate Court because of the illness of their attorney.

They were Mrs. Reba M. Arnold of near Racine, Boone county, wife of the speaker of the 1941 House of Delegates; Leslie Arnold, brother of the speaker; Leslie's wife, June Bennett Arnold; and Mrs. Thelma Neace Perry of Logan, sister-in-law of Delegate Lester Perry.

Intermediate Judge Jackson Savage also continued in force the $2,000 bond for each of the four.

D. L. Salisbury, their attorney, became ill last Saturday and was taken to a hospital from the courtroom during the trial of Speaker Malcolm R. Arnold, who is appealing his conviction and one-to-ten year sentence for aiding and abetting grand larceny.

Lester Perry now is serving a one-to-ten year sentence imposed on his plea of guilty to grand larceny.

June and Leslie Arnold are accused of grand larceny in the same indictment which named Malcolm Arnold as an accessory. Separate larceny indictments were returned against Mrs. Reba M. Arnold and Mrs. Perry, who were listed as attaches for the 1941 legislative session.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

DISCARDING BIG ONES

HAVE YOU ever had the pleasure of discarding the ace and king of a suit in order to unblock it and thereby create the only chance to make your contract? Opportunities for such plays do not come often, but when they do, we get a great kick out of recognizing them and availing ourselves of them.

	♠ J 7 ♥ J 8 ♦ Q J 10 8 6 5 ♣ A K 10
♠ 8 6 5 ♥ None ♦ 9 4 3 2 ♣ Q 9 7 5 3 2	W. N. E. S.	♠ 9 2 ♥ A K 7 6 5 4 3 ♦ 7 ♣ 8 6 4

Pass	6 ♠

When West led the club 5 against this contract, Colonel Robert J. Gill of Baltimore, president of the American Contract Bridge league, recognized a pretty problem and found a pretty solution for it. He was playing in the open pair championship of the Southern Appalachian tournament at Asheville, N. C., and did a beautiful job, both in bidding and in play, in spite of the barrier raised against him by East's high opener.

As a matter of fact, that bid helped him to plan safe play of the hand. After letting the club lead run to his J, he cashed the spade A and J, then called the club A and K, discarding on them the diamond A and K. Followed next the diamond Q, J and 10, for three heart discards, and he later gave up a heart, making his contract.

After the hand was over, somebody pointed out that he could have taken all of the tricks if he had first laid down the diamond A and then taken two trumps and three of the dummy's diamonds. That would have enabled him to discard all four of the hearts and make an unbid grand slam.

He had the soundest of all reasons for not doing this. After seeing that the deal would probably not be in a slam contract at all at most tables, and that there were two definite heart losers in the hand if East led against a contract in diamonds or No Trump, he decided to protect his favorable contract by basing his plan on the idea that East might be blank in diamonds. Had East been blank, he could have ruffed the diamond A if that plan had been tried, and then could have taken two heart tricks, setting the contract two.

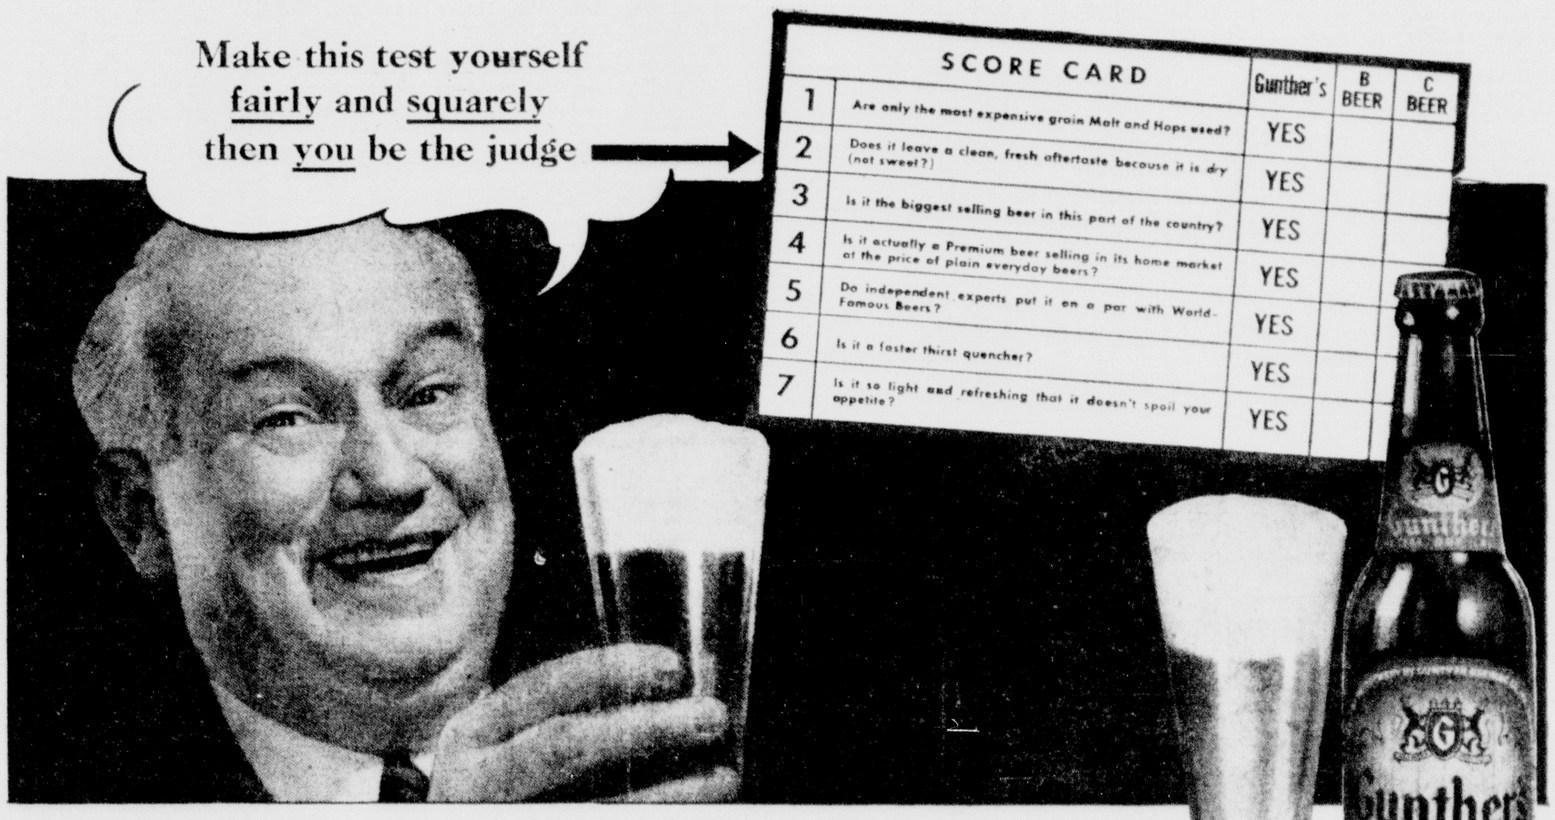
as to who makes the finest beer?



SOME DAYS—if you're thirsty enough—almost any beer will taste good going down. But if you want a beer that will stand by you day after day . . . then you'll do yourself a lot of good if you'll just slant your eyes across that score card up there in the picture.

You'll see plain simple statements. No ballyhoo. No pressure selling. Just the hard, cold steel facts. You do the checking. You do the analyzing. You make the decision.

And if you're the kind of person who judges on fact rather than fancy—we know what your answer will be.

Such a fair and square test will be reassuring to those who have made Gunther's the largest-selling beer in this territory, on its dry beery beer taste alone.

It's one thing to like the Taste of Gunther's! But somehow you'll enjoy that taste twice as much, if you know, yourself, that it IS the finest beer that can be brewed regardless of price!

DRY BEER-Y Gunther's Beer IS SMOOTHER GOING DOWN!

Brooklyn Wins National League Pennant

Wyatt Shuts Out Boston 6 to 0; Cards Lose 3-1

Dodgers Win First Flag in 21 Years; Reiser Slams Out Home Run

By BILL KING

BOSTON, Sept. 25 (AP) — Just when they really were going daffy the Brooklyn Dodgers today clinched the National League pennant, their third in history and first in twenty-one years, by shutting out the humble Boston Braves 6 to 0 on the five-hit pitching of Whit Wyatt.

The triumph, Brooklyn's eighteenth in twenty-two games with the seventh-place Braves, was achieved while the St. Louis Cardinals were crumpling their last faint hopes in a 3 to 1 defeat at Pittsburgh.

This left the Dodgers two and one-half games in front with only two games remaining for each club.

Wyatt was supreme in scoring his twenty-second victory and seventh shutout of the season. It was the sixth time he had beaten the Braves and he held all but three of them hitless, fanned five and allowed only one pass.

He also joined in the nine-hit attack his teammates waged on Tom Early and Earl Johnson of the Braves.

The Dodgers decided the game with a run in the first inning. Dixie Walker led off with the first of three singles he was to make, advanced on a walk to Two-Gun Pete Reiser and Dolph Camilli's infield out, and raced home as Joe (Ducky) Medwick bunted safely.

Reiser Hits Home Run

The Brooks scored again in each of the next two frames and crushed any chance of their being overtaken when Reiser ripped off his fourteenth home run with one on in the seventh.

The second Brooklyn run was supplied by little Mickey Owen, who singled, stole second, went to third on another hit by Walker, and then crossed the plate standing up as catcher Ray Berres tried to trap Walker after he had rounded first.

In the third 'Bama Rowell made three errors, two of them on one play, to help the Dodgers to another tally.

Reiser's homer into the right-field stands followed a fumble by shortstop Eddie Miller that let Wyatt reach first in the seventh. Then in the eighth Lavagetto singled and came all the way around on another single by Pewee Reese and a double play.

Wyatt Never in Trouble

Johnson pitched the ninth and gave Walker his final hit.

Wyatt was never in trouble. He was touched for a double and a single by Max West, for two singles by Rowell and for one by Phil Waner.

News of the Cardinals' defeat came while the Dodgers were at bat in the ninth inning and the 10,098 fans sent up a lusty roar of approval. The Dodger players jumped around in their dugout, pounding each other and shaking hands.

When the game was over Wyatt was practically mobbed by his teammates.

The contest climaxed one of the bitterest dogfights the National League arena has ever sheltered. From the time the teams got down to business in the second week of the season, neither the Dodgers nor the Cardinals ever were worse than second place.

Brooklyn gained the lead for the first time on April 28 and started the ordeal which lasted till today. Exclusive of ties the Dodgers were in first place nine different times, regaining it for keeps on September 4 when the Cardinals blew a doubleheader to the Chicago Cubs while Brooklyn had an idle day.

The Dodgers attained a four-game advantage on July 15 for the greatest distance that was between the two rivals all season. They were back in second place nine days later.

Dodgers Cop League Laurels

Wyatt's victory gave the Dodgers two twenty-two-game winners to throw against the Yanks in the series.

Kirby Higbe won his twenty-second here yesterday. Altogether their pitchers have come up with seventeen shutouts.

The Dodgers also have the National League batting champion in Reiser, a rookie who joined the club late in the 1940 season, and the league's leading slugger in Dolph Camilli, who has hit thirty-four home runs and batted in 119 runs.

Sigh of Relief Is Mingled with Joy Of Happy Dodgers

Durocher Gives Credit to Players for Winning Championship

BOSTON, Sept. 25 (AP)—Cheers of joy and sighs of relief alternated today when the jubilant Brooklyn Dodgers, their National League pennant hopes secure, stormed into their dressing room after putting the final touches to their happiest season since 1920.

As soon as their first spontaneous whoops faded into silence, Manager Leo Durocher and most of his players relaxed and took deep breaths. Then they milled around the room, back slapping and congratulating each other, Wyatt especially.

Durocher Is Tired

"I'm glad this is over," Durocher explained. "I haven't done a thing but I'm very tired."

While Lippy Leo was peeling off his uniform, fat Freddy Fitzsimmons, who had experienced similar thrills when he was with the Giants, crowded in beside his manager and remarked:

"This Boston is just the place to clinch the pennant. We did it back in 1936 when I was with the Giants."

"And so did the Yankees here about three weeks ago," one of his teammates jeered.

As "Dem Bums" sped through their dressing, preparing to depart for home on a special train, they told one another, "if this strain lasted another day, we really would go daffy."

Durocher was so overwhelmed by his well-wishers that he could crowd in only a few words. "The boys are the ones to congratulate," he pointed out. "They won for us."

The beaming Wyatt disagreed with admirers who insisted he had turned in a magnificent performance. "I had better stuff in my last two starts," he explained.

Herman's Injury Slight

Another joyous touch was added to the Dodgers' victory celebration when the club trainer reported that Billy Herman's second injury within two weeks to his right knee was not a serious one.

The second baseman twisted that tender joint again today while making a diving save on pinch hitter Frank Demaree's grounder in the eighth inning. He was removed after the side was retired but, Herman explained, "I could have stayed in if I was needed."

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., Sept. 25—(The Special News Service)—It was hot for late September and the gray dust along the road around the dwarfed building that served as Lou Nova's training quarters rose lazily to bleach out the blue haze about the foothills of the distant Ramapos.

A hundred or so spectators, including a goodly delegation of fight writers, squatted on the hard benches on three sides of the orange-daubed ring, which was planted in a little grove on a hillside overlooking the stagnant overflow from Lake Pompton.

They talked about this and about that, about the Dodgers and about football, but very little about fights until Nova, wearing heavy Kelly-green trunks over a pair of red ones, strode from his dressing room toward the ring.

Nova Exudes Strength

He climbed into the ring and started shadow boxing, looking rather silly as he took vicious cuts at invisible opponents. But there was nothing silly looking about his physique, and even the most critical ringsiders agreed that if sheer strength and condition could beat Joe Louis, Nova should win next Monday night.

Ray Arcel strapped on Lou's head buffer and tied leather pillows on his hands as the harried Mushky Jackson introduced the first sparring partners, "Jim Neville of Eliz-beth, New Joisey." There was some polite, tennis-gallery applause and Nova and Neville started slugging each other.

Nova's actions, particularly his footwork, were 100 per cent better than they were when he came east a couple of years ago with a crew haircut and a burning ambition. You really couldn't tell much about just how good he was, though, as he snorted and grunted and slugged and tugged, although you'd hear such undertone comments from the experts as "he comes in with his left too low" or "he jabs and then pulls back his head; Louis'll knock his brains out if he does that."

Neville went one long round, and a chunky fellow named Johnny Aichers, pronounced Achers, went in for two more, during which Nova held his arms wide and invited Aichers to pound his middle, with Aichers accommodating lustily. The sharp-eyed Arcel hovered over Lou all during the workout, cautioning and urging by turns.

Nova's club-like blows failed to upset either spar partner, and he finally climbed through the ropes to tackle the light and heavy bags as Mushky announced in his best scrambled dialect: "Thoisday will be the last day of Lou Nova to box here," fortunately adding the "to box here" and not confusing Thursday with next Monday.

The massive Nova, perspiration glistening in tiny beads on his face, adjourned to the rubbing table, where he downed two cups of tea as Arcel started to work over him. The experts adjourned to the Seventeenth Century House where Lou sleeps in a bed in which George Washington is supposed to have slept. Someone suggested it was the same mattress, too, but nobody believed that.

Arcel Thinks He Has Champ

The workout failed to jar any opinions the experts held before coming to the camp. They have made up their minds whether Nova will win or Louis will win, and after all, three rounds against fellows who wouldn't be sparring partners if they were much good don't tell anything.

Nova unquestionably is a superb physical specimen and neither his confidence nor that of his manager, Ray Carlen, is feigned. More important than their opinions, however, and the only incident of the day which left a lasting, and disturbing, impression, was the comment of Arcel, who is taking his tenth man into a corner to face the brown meat chopper.

Arcel, always honest and sincere, thought long and then groped for words to express an inner feeling when asked if, of all the ten men, he thought Nova had the best chance.

"I'll put it this way," he said earnestly. "The others I hoped might win. With this fellow I have a feeling here," he clutched his chest expressively, "that I have the next champion."

WHEN A KELLER NEEDS A FRIEND

If the Charley Kellers, Sr., and Jr., look pretty glum here in Yankee stadium, New York, there's a reason. Keller will be out of the world series, having chipped a bone in his ankle while sliding into a base during a recent game. The slugging outfielder's place will be taken by George Selkirk.

Louis-Nova Fight Odds Are Narrowed By Gambling Guys

Fight Mob Pours into New York for Heavyweight Title Match Monday

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP) — The fight mob moved in on Pa Knickerbocker's village in full force today and brought with it enough new support for Lou Nova to cause the gambling guys to narrow the odds even further for the Californian's clout party with Joe Louis next Monday.

At the same time, up in Pompton Lakes, N. J., Louie the Yogi wound up his public punching drills for the Polo Grounds party, but manager Ray Carlen revealed the California husky would have a secret workout tomorrow with "a big name fighter" to learn something or other which Manager Ray refused to disclose.

Californians Back Nova

The betting boys announced that "a fresh load of scratch" had just arrived for Nova from California with the vanguard of the crowd of 50,000 which is expected to jam the ball park Monday. As a result, the commissioners felt they were forced to shave the price to 5 to 12 in Louis' favor.

With one of the biggest sports weeks in the history of our town in prospect, what with both the World Series and a world heavyweight bout on the program, hotels were filling up and a few of the incoming folks wondered if they could rent sleeping room on Central Park's benches. Boxing writers poured in on every train, some of them all the way from California.

Both Will Weigh about 202

Finishing up his spar-work, Nova breezed through four rounds with a couple of gentlemen and belabored them considerably.

Louis, meantime, took things easy today and will wind up his conditioning with sock sessions Friday and Saturday.

Physically, there was as little to choose between the two warriors as between getting tangled up with a speeding automobile or an army tank. Nova finished up weighing 206 and expects to tip the scales at 202 at the boxing commission weigh-in next Monday. Louis will be right in that neighborhood himself.

William and Mary Is Ready for Navy

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Sept. 25 (AP)—William and Mary's football squad will leave shortly after breakfast tomorrow for Annapolis, Md., where the Indians will meet Navy on Saturday.

Coach Carl Voyles will work the Indians on the Middies' field Friday afternoon.

The Tribesmen staged their final pre-game practice at home today with a light signal drill and dummy defensive and offensive maneuvers.

Marvin Bass, regular tackle, remained on the sidelines and was not expected to be ready for the Navy game.

Redskins Make Trade

Washington—The recent trade of Jimmy Johnston for Ki Aldrich by the Washington Redskins proved to be practically a gift for the Capital team. Aldrich is a regular with the Washington Redskins, but Johnston, who was to have joined the Chicago Cardinals, enlisted in the Air Corps just before he was to be drafted for the army.

Leo "Gabby" Hartnett Given Outright Release By New York Giant Club

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25 (AP) — Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, a great, jovial figure in the National League for twenty years, was given his outright release by the New York Giants today to give him a chance to make another connection if he wished.

The big fellow who starred for many years as the catcher of the Chicago Cubs and then managed the club from the middle of the 1938 season until the end of last season, had served this year as a combination coach and catcher for the Giants.

"I would like it understood that Gabby was made free only so that he might better himself," explained Manager Bill Terry. "He was released so that he can dicker for a managerial post somewhere and with the understanding that if he does not locate elsewhere he can return and find a coaching berth waiting for him with the Giants. He was a big help to us."

Pittsburgh Knocks Cards Out of Flag Race by 3-1 Win

Max Butcher Fans Two Pinch Hitters in Seventh with Bases Full

By DUKE MORAN

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals' last feeble chance for the National League pennant expired today in a 3-1 defeat by the Pittsburgh Pirates and it was an ex-Brooklyn Dodger, big Max Butcher who was chief executioner.

The Cards' defeat, coupled with Brooklyn's victory over Boston, left the Dodgers 2½ games in front with only two games to play.

Butcher could not have been more merciless today. The big fellow pitched five-hit ball and when St. Louis staged its only threat in the seventh inning he blotted out the Cards last chance by fanning two pinch-hitters to retire the side.

In contrast, Ernie White, a southpaw who has starred for St. Louis all year, found himself in trouble from the start of the game.

White had to fan Elbie Fletcher with the bases loaded in the first inning to escape damage. But the Pirates kept nicking his offers persistently and got their first run in the third inning when Rookie Billy Cox tripled to left center and trotted home after Estel Crabtree caught Arky Vaughan's long fly to left.

Fletcher gained sweet revenge and settled the ball game in the sixth inning by belting a home run inside

Workouts Completed By Colonials for Game with Mounts

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (AP)—Another light workout with emphasis on passing was staged by George Washington University's football squad today as the Colonials rested their injured personnel.

Johnny Picco, All-District end in 1940, has not fully recovered from a leg injury and will be replaced by Dan Douglas Saturday when G. W. plays host to Mount St. Mary's. Walter Murphy will start in place of the injured Dan Snyder at right tackle, but otherwise the Colonials will lineup as anticipated.

Don Pinnow and Walter Fedora, both hard-hitting backs, did not participate in today's workout but are scheduled to be ready for action Saturday.

The Colonials will start a line composed entirely of Pennsylvanians, with the exception of left end, where Stan Ziobro of Bayonne, N. J., will perform.

Another brief workout is scheduled tomorrow. Coach Bill Reinhart will lecture the squad on Mount St. Mary's plays before the final workout.

DODGER IN BEANTOWN

Pitcher Kirby Higbe, one of the chief reasons the Brooklyn Dodgers are "up there" is pictured in a Boston, Mass., hotel lobby, during the Brooklyn series with the Braves of that city.

"I'M PROUD OF TEAM" CARDS' MANAGER SAYS AFTER GALLANT FIGHT

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25 (AP)—Billy Southworth, popular manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, whose last pennant chance faded today with a 3-1 defeat handed them by the Pirates, took his disappointment with a smile.

"We made a gallant fight of it," he said. "We never gave up clear down the stretch. We just weren't good enough and Brooklyn was.

"I am proud of the team. And I know we will make it very much tougher for the Dodgers next year."

Southworth added that the "boys" had been handicapped in the final stage of the campaign by loss of two power hitters, Johnny Mize and Enos Slaughter. He didn't go into the long series of injuries which had dogged his club through most of the season.

The players, too, seemed to take their defeat philosophically.

MacPhail Weeps As His Dodgers Win Pennant

LaGuardia First To Send Telegram of Congratulations on Victory

By STEVEN WILLIAMS

BROOKLYN, Sept. 25 (AP)—Larry MacPhail, a strong man if Brooklyn ever saw one, put his arms on his desk and cried into a stack of world series checks when Ducky Medwick called up from Boston today to tell him baseball's dizziest team was bringing home a pennant.

The strain of a sensational season, broken so suddenly by victory, brought tears to many a leather-lunged rooter who felt as much pride of ownership in the Flatbush flock as MacPhail.

In the offices of the Dodger headquarters, a party was started by the ticket-sellers, gatemen and policemen who had wrestled with the tumultuous crowds in Ebbets field all through the roaring summer. They grinned while they wept.

Crowd To Meet Team

Down the thronged streets of Greenport and Brownsville and even to the far reaches out Coney Island way, the thousands who had listened to radio broadcasts in stores and bars looked at one another and let loose the first wild yells of a coming storm of joy.

Word spread that the Dodgers would be coming into town at mid-

Allegany and Ridgeley Play Here Tonight

Meet in Fort Hill Stadium At 8 o'Clock

LaSalle To Meet Altoona in Game There; Sentinels Play Saturday

The Allegany high Campers and Ridgeley's eleven from just across the Potomac river will meet under the lights at the Fort Hill stadium tonight at 8 o'clock in a football game which has almost all the earmarks of an intra-city tussle.

Coach Bill Hahn's Ridgeleyites, who suffered a beating at the hands of Ball's 1940 Blue and White combination, will try to get revenge for that setback but from the impressive showing made by Allegany in its opener with St. Francis Catholic high of Morgantown, W. Va., last week, the Hahnman will have their hands full.

Both clubs got by initial tests with Ridgeley downing Piedmont 13-6 and Allegany breezing past St. Francis 14-0. However, the Campers appeared at least four touchdowns better than the Morgantown crew while Ridgeley found Piedmont a stubborn foe.

Allegany will miss Ralph Bowers, guard who will probably sit the game out on the bench. Don Basilio, up from the Jayvees, will replace Bowers.

Hahn Makes Changes

Fullback Snyder, who scored all of Allegany's points against St. Francis, has been bothered by a hand injury and will be replaced by Smith, a hard-driving runner of 160 pounds. Coach Herman Ball said that Bob McCoy will get the end post filled last week by Jack Crites.

Coach Bill Hahn has made some changes in the Ridgeley lineup, shifting Bearn from guard to end and Barncord from end to guard. He said last night Robert Lindsay will likely start at center in place of Arrington. Jimmy Shannon is still being held out of rough work and Hahn said it is doubtful if he will be able to play against Allegany. The other boys are in good shape and members of the squad are putting up a hard fight for places in the starting lineup.

LaSalle Goes to Altoona

While Allegany and Ridgeley are holding the spotlight here tonight, LaSalle's Explorers will be trying for their first victory of the season at Altoona. The Blue and Gold will meet Altoona Catholic high gridders in another night clash starting at 8 o'clock Eastern Daylight Time.

Altoona opened its campaign last week with an easy 26-0 triumph over Roaring Spring, scoring in every period but the second. St. John, newcomer to Coach Ken Stilley's backfield, sparked the Altoona crew to victory.

Coach Stilley has only three regulars from last year available—Guard Detterbeck, Center Riggle and Fullback Ranck. Other lettermen are Ends Stoehr, McAteer and Adams, Tackle Klesius and Guard Griebel.

Altoona will probably line up with McAteer and Stoehr at the ends, Luddy and Klesius at the tackles, Griebel and Roesch at the guards, Riggle at center, Shope at quarter, St. John and Costlow at the halves and Ranck at fullback.

The officials will be J. W. Martin, W. H. Hoffman and E. Hill.

Four Conference Games

Four Potomac Valley Conference games are also on today's slate. Piedmont will play at Romney, Parsons at Keyser, Thomas at Petersburg and Franklin at Moorefield. Other tussles slated today are West Virginia School for the Deaf and the Grafton Industrial school at Romney and Harrisonburg at Charles Town.

Tomorrow's program will be headlined by the afternoon contest here between Fort Hill's Sentinels and South Hills high of Pittsburgh, with the Scarlet and White Hilltoppers seeking their second straight victory and their second in three starts. Coach Johnny Long's eleven lost to Baltimore City College in its opener and then bounced back to trim Charlotte Hall Military Academy 4-0.

Other games tomorrow are Harpers Ferry at Hagerstown, Calvin Coolidge high of Washington, D. C., at Handley of Winchester, Va., and Potomac State's Catamounts at Keyville.

Daffy Dodgers Are Expected To Give Fans Wild Series

May Cause Yankees To Think They're in Greased Pig Contest

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP)—The World Series next week promises to be the most fascinating in many years and although it will be a subway series played, more or less, for New Yorkers, it has excited the entire country.

Brooklyn's delirious Dodgers are responsible for this intense interest, of course, even though the New York Yankees have come coasting up to the classic with all sorts of advantages in their favor.

The Yankees are a marvelous machine. They have won five American League pennants in the last six years and haven't been defeated in their last two World Series. They swept to world championships in 1938 and 1939 in consecutive games against Chicago and Cincinnati.

They are coming up to this series, just as they did in those years, relaxed and ready. They have had almost nothing to do during the entire month of September except prepare themselves for the fuss with whoever came out of the National League cauldron.

Their invalids have had time to get well and their weary have had time to rest.

Brooklyn Never Gives Up

If the Yanks were going to face anyone but Brooklyn—even if they were going to oppose the hard-fighting, courageous St. Louis Cardinals — this month-long release from strain might very well be decisive.

But the Dodgers are different. They are "destiny's darlings" and some Providence has watched over them throughout the hurly-burly struggle that has been going on all season long in the senior circuit.

They are a club that never knows when it is beaten and they are not afraid of the Yankees, with whom they played ten exhibition games in the spring and split even.

This determination, and reckless disregard for trouble, will be in Brooklyn's favor. They make mistakes and ignore them. They do silly things that cause other clubs to make mistakes and go distracted. They blow leads and then produce miraculous rallies from nowhere.

Durocher Is Fiery Leader

Their very spirit is Manager Leo Durocher, a loud, swashbuckler who was a fine shortstop for the Yankees in the Miller Huggins era. He keeps the club boiling on a hot fire. He does unpredictable things that even his own club doesn't understand, shuffles his lineups and his pitchers with abandon, plays hunches, fights umpires and generally keeps everybody in a turmoil.

He is the exact opposite of Marse Joe McCarthy, who seldom comes out of the dugout, discourages scenes with umpires, maneuvers his men calmly and orderly, and plays his percentages straight.

But both men get results and McCarthy's method probably would land him in the second division if he were working with the furious, frolicsome regime at Brooklyn.

The Dodgers have two pitchers, each of whom has won twenty-two games, they have a .300 hitting outfield, the league's batting champion and the league's home run king. Underneath the frosting they have solid, meaty baseball.

But most of all they have that intangible Dodger mania which has driven the rest of the National League crazy. They may make the Yankees think they are in a greased pig contest instead of a ball game and they are sure to give the fans a wild, hysterical World Series, win or lose.

Giants Eke Out Win over Phils

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25 (AP)—The New York Giants eked out a 3 to 2 victory in the ninth inning today in their farewell to the Phillies.

With the score tied and the bases loaded in the ninth, Johnny McCarthy raised a Texas League single back of first to bring Babe Barna home with the winning run and tack the second defeat in two days on old Si Johnson.

The Football Scythe

The football scythe, 1941 model, will be extremely busy Friday night and Saturday afternoon. More than a few from the upper delegations must drop into the list of the beaten even before October arrives.

You can understand this when you take a brief glance at the games to be played in the next few hours — Minnesota and Washington — Tulane and Boston college — Michigan and Michigan State — Georgetown and Mississippi — Indiana and Detroit — Purdue and Vanderbilt — Florida and Mississippi State — T. C. U. and Tulsa — Holy Cross and Louisiana State — Ohio State and Missouri — North Carolina and South Carolina — Georgia and Mercer — Duke and Wake Forest — California and St. Mary's — Southern California and Oregon State — Navy and William and Mary — U. C. L. A. and Washington State — Stanford and Oregon — to mention only a partial list.

This means that defeat will come quickly to a large group of colleges which expect to have good seasons, in spite of one or two dents.

The Harder to Pick

Which are the toughest of the lot to pick?

I'd name two — Boston college and Tulane — Mississippi and Georgetown.

Boston college has its old 1940 pachydermic display of beef and brawn, plus its 1940 speed. You wouldn't figure a team could lose an O'Rourke and a Gladchuck and be the same. But the B. C. Eagle may fly just as high this fall as it flew last season with its eyrie in the sky.

Tulane is rated one of the big teams and one of the better teams from Dixie. Red Dawson's squad is well equipped with linemen and backs. I'll take a chance on Boston college with its better passing.

With Hapes and Hovious under full and fast steam against a stout Georgetown defense, this will be a thriller in Washington, Friday night.

Harry Mehre has a first-class outfit at Ole Miss this fall and Hagerty has a neat allotment of man power waiting at Georgetown. If there is any edge here it belongs to Georgetown's superior man power, but there won't be much edge either way.

Other Tough Ones

Minnesota looks to have a trifle more than Jimmy Phelan's Washington team, one of the best on the Pacific coast, can quite handle. But the game will be no walkover, even for a squad that carries the Gophers' potential destructive force.

Two more of the harder games to pick are Michigan and Michigan State — Indiana and Detroit. The two entries from the sovereign state of Michigan are close to a draw. Indiana has a shade over Detroit, but nothing to bring Bo McMillin a carefree night of dreamless sleep, even with Hillenbrand in action.

You'll find another corking good scrap when Vanderbilt moves against Purdue. Red Sanders has Vanderbilt on the way again, despite losses to the army, but he has the type of team that will give Purdue a busy afternoon. Purdue has the edge, but her margin is none too wide.

You can also add the Florida-Mississippi State and L. S. U.-Holy Cross games to the roundup of double trouble for any picker. Mississippi State had one of the country's finest teams last fall, but many of her stars are through. From these two games I'd nominate Mississippi State and L. S. U. But there will be no upset whatever happens.

Not So Hard

Others are not so hard to call in advance. Navy's big, fast squad should overpower William and Mary.

Alabama, Duke and Tennessee — three of the best below the M. and D. line — should finish on top.

North Carolina has a slight jump on South Carolina.

Texas and S. M. U. — two of the top teams from the high-ranking Southwest — should start galloping, but T. C. U. can run into trouble against Tulsa.

Ohio State won't have any soft afternoon with Missouri, but the Buckeyes have too much in reserve strength. Maybe.

Georgia is too good for Mercer. Georgia should be too good for many teams this fall.

Ray Morrison's Temple team should get away nicely for a good year, and so should Colgate, a team to watch this fall. Colgate will have one of her best teams in many years.

Notre Dame has too much team and squad for Arizona.

Oklahoma has the call over Oklahoma A. and M.

There are still a large group of teams waiting for another week, but this present weekend schedule will give us a good line on things to happen later on when football takes command after the Louis-Nova fight and the world series are over. Especially should we look toward New Orleans and Washington, D. C., where Boston College and Tulane and Mississippi and Georgetown get together. Here are two of the best action spots, and the picking is full of thorns.—North American Newspaper Alliance.

the park, driving in Vince DiMaggio ahead of him.

White gave way to a pinch-hitter in the next inning and Lonnie Warneke finished on the mound for St. Louis.

The Cards' biggest chance came with one out in the seventh. Stan Musial beat out a topped shot down the third base line and raced to third on Crabtree's single to center. Don Padgett batted for Creepy Crespi and walked, filling the bases. Enos Slaughter batted for Marty Marion and walked, forcing in Musial. Butcher settled down there and throttled the Cards last chance for the pennant by fanning pinch-hitters Walter Sessi and Coaker Triplett.

Romney Silents Will Open Season Today

ROMNEY, W. Va. — Coach "Chuck" Collette's West Virginia School for Deaf football eleven will open its 1941 season this afternoon at 2:30 against Boys Industrial School of Pruntytown.

The Pruntytown team has already played two games this year, losing to Burnsville, 19-6, and defeating Kingwood, 12-6, under their new coach, Robert J. Heckert, who played football at West Virginia University.

The local team will probably line-up with Skryzpeck and Wills at ends; McVey and Ballard at tackles; Bragg and Russell at guards; Kabulski at center, and Grabill, Cook, Shrout, and Crigler or Venettis in the backfield.

Fruntytown's lineup possibly will find Lilly and Jones at ends; Hudgins and Hincho at tackles; Cataline and Smith at guards; Hill at center, and Ronk, Lotts, Mayberry and King carrying the mail.

Pruntytown will outweigh the local team by 14 pounds to the man, averaging 160 and the Silents 146.

With a light and inexperienced team at his command, Collette will send his boys into the game as the underdog team. The rivals did not meet last season.

Louis To Box in Camp

FORT CUSTER, Mich., Sept. 25 (AP)—Joe Louis, heavyweight champion, will appear in an exhibition bout here Oct. 15. Louis will meet a sparring partner on a boxing program on which Tony Zale, middleweight champion, also is to appear.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 25 (AP)—Rider college opened its new athletic field today with an old habit, the twenty-seventh consecutive victory by its soccer team over a three-year campaign, beating Panzer college.

Ray Starr Holds Chicago to Two Hits; Reds Win

Cincinnati Takes Final Home Game of Season by 6 to 0 Score

CINCINNATI, Sept. 25 (AP)—The two-hit hurling of Ray Starr, veteran Minor Leaguer up from Indianapolis, gave the Cincinnati Reds their second consecutive shutout over Chicago today, 6 to 0, in the season's final home game.

Rookie Chuck Aleno paced the two-hit Red attack, his double opening a five-run rally on four hits and an error in the fifth, and a second two-bagger in the sixth being good for a run after a sacrifice and Bob Mattick's single.

Both uprisings were off Jake Mooty, one-time Redleg, who hurled the middle three frames.

Navy Has Scrimmage

ANNAPOLIS, Sept. 25 (AP)—Navy's pigskin players today participated in their last scrimmage session before the season's opener here Saturday with William and Mary.

The Varsity players scrimmaged the Junior Varsity, which used William and Mary plays, for about half an hour. Later, the first and second middie teams faced each other in dummy scrimmage.

The Tars also went through a lengthy punting drill. Swede Larson, Middie coach, said he doubted that Capt. Bob Froude, injured left end, will be able to play Saturday. If he isn't ready, Bob Zoeller, second string wingman, will fill the first team post, Larson said.

13 May Start In Futurity

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP) — As many as 13 of the 98 juveniles remaining eligible to the Futurity are expected to go postward in the fifty-second running of the rich classic at Belmont Park, Saturday. If the field reaches that number the six and one-half furlongs race will have a gross value of $78,500.

Shaping up as the favorites are the two winners of the Futurity trials, Dogpatch and Amphitheatre, Mrs. Payne Witney's combination of Devil Diver and Shut Out, Warren Wright's Some Chance and the Paragon Stable's Anibras.

Pittsburgh Steelers Sign Donelli

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25 (AP)—Bert Bell co-owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, of the National Pro Football League, and team coach until he resigned yesterday, today announced the signing of Aldo (Buff) Donelli, head coach at Duquesne University, as mentor of the Steelers for the remainder of the 1941 season.

Bell said that Donelli's services had been acquired "with the permission of the Rev. Father Raymond D. Kirk, president of Duquesne University," and Donelli himself disclosed that he would retain his college portfolio, devoting his "spare moments" to the pro team.

MacPhail Weeps

night, and there wasn't any doubt that there would be a tide of humanity sweeping over the station when the boys arrived.

Telegrams of congratulation began to flow into MacPhail's sanctum. Among the first at bat was Mayor F. H. La Guardia, who informed MacPhail "I am now really proud of Brooklyn" and wired Leo Durocher, team manager, "greetings from one temperamentalist to another."

Tickets for Home Fans

John F. Collins, business manager, came through with a practical assurance to the faithful who climbed walls and leaped fences from April to September to watch their team, that no more world series seats would be available to "out of towners."

"But we're still accepting reservations from our regular customers," he said.

The Brooklyn Eagle, the sprawling borough's only newspaper, blazoned forth the tidings in a black banner headline bigger than the one used for Hitler's invasion of Poland.

"We win!" the Eagle screamed.

Newsboys demanding that patrons make reservations for morning editions, warning that the orders from customers who wanted them for memory books were mounting hour by hour.

One of the earliest exhibition parachute jumps was made from the Statue of Liberty.

POTOMAC STATE PLAYS GLENVILLE SATURDAY

Keyser, W. Va., Sept. 25. — The Potomac State Catamounts have been going through hard scrimmage sessions this week under Coach Dana "Horse" Lough in preparation for their first West Virginia Conference game of the season with the strong Glenville College team at Glenville this Saturday.

Lough was not pleased with the play of the line in the game last week with St. Mary's, which the Cats lost 6-0, and has made several shifts in an attempt to provide more weight and aggressive defensive play.

Virgil Barr, a guard, and Charles Smith have been running at tackle this week, while Bob Luebbe, a freshman, and Tom Lopez have been shifted to tackle and end, respectively. Lough states every position on the team is open and that he will continue to experiment until he finds an aggressive team.

The team party of 26 players, two managers, and Lough will leave by bus tomorrow afternoon for the game with Glenville, which will start at 2:00 Saturday afternoon on the Glenville College field.

Glenville teams, coached by "Nate" Rohrbaugh, are always strong and tough opponents, and this year's team has several experienced veterans back. Last year Glenville defeated Potomac State by a score of 6 to 0.

Next week the Catamounts will meet Waynesburg College at Waynesburg, Pa., before they have their annual Homecoming game with Concord at Keyser the week following.

Local Dairymen Asked To Increase Milk Production

Health Officials Oppose Enlarging of Present Milk Shed

An appeal to farmers to increase production in the Cumberland milk shed instead of enlarging the present shed has been made by Dr. Theodore R. Shrop, city and county health officer and J. Byron Dowling, milk and food inspector of the city health department.

Dowling stated that the demand for milk has been greatly increased by new business and increased prices on canned milk, and by-products plants. He added that if the milk shed is enlarged, the additional producers brought in still will remain after the emergency.

"We have hope that within the next two or three weeks our present producers with the buying of commercial feed will give us our regular production," Dowling said.

Both Shrop and Dowling admitted that to enlarge the shed would be a permanent arrangement and when the emergency is over the new producers would jeopardize the old market built up over a period of years.

Dr. Shrop also said that there will be no changes in the present regulations to take any milk into this market that would cut down quality.

The Cumberland milk shed covers the territory within a radius of thirty-five miles of the city hall and includes 196 milk producers who turn out 6,500 gallons daily.

The enlargement idea came to the attention of local health officials when farmers outside of the area asked to be included in the Cumberland milk shed.

Dairy Firm Sues Bonding Company

Queen City Dairy Seeks Recovery of Funds Allegedly Embezzled

Suit to recover from a bonding company money allegedly embezzled by a bonded employe was filed yesterday in circuit court by the Queen City Dairy, Inc.

The suit, docketed against the Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Company of New York by Thomas L. Richards, attorney, says that the dairy firm had had its employes bonded by the defendant company beginning January 1, 1940, under a contract calling for the insurer to "reimburse the plaintiff for any direct pecuniary loss . . . of money, securities, merchandise or personal property occasioned by any act or acts of fraud, dishonesty or by any criminal act committed directly or through connivance by any employe . . . in the performance of the duties of his position."

A route salesman, Charles T. Frazier, was bonded under the contract to the extent of $1,000, the declaration goes on, adding that between January 1, 1940, and April 12, 1941, he embezzled $672.12 from the company.

The suit claims $1,000, representing the amount of the alleged defalcation plus interest and costs.

Frazier is now in the county jail awaiting grand jury action on the embezzlement charge.

Less Sugar Means Better Teeth, Dentist Says

Eighty Per Cent of Population Gets No Dental Care, Kiwanians Told

Reduction in the amount of sugar and sugar products in the diet is apparently one of the best methods of insuring sound teeth, Cumberland Kiwanians were told yesterday by a dentist.

The speaker was Dr. Albert C. Cook, president of the Allegany-Garrett County Dental Society, who in a talk at the Kiwanis club's weekly luncheon-meeting at the Fort Cumberland hotel also expressed concern over the large segment of the population which does not receive dental care.

80 Per Cent Lack Care

More than eighty per cent of the American people receive no dental attention, Dr. Cook said. At a loss to explain fully why only between eighteen and nineteen per cent of the population does receive such care, he pointed out that much of it must be attributed to people's failure to take care of themselves, which, in turn, may be traceable to lack of education in the importance of healthy teeth and gums.

The speaker noted, too, that there is a shortage of dentists, the profession being woefully undermanned.

As to diet rules tending to promote sound teeth, Dr. Cook said that recent experiments indicate the efficacy of these four:

Rules Listed

1. Cut down the amount of sucrose or sugar. Eliminate candy and sugar as such. If sweetening must be used, switch to honey or brown sugar instead of refined, white sugar.
2. Increase the amount of Vitamin C in the diet. Orange juice is an important source of this vitamin.
3. Eat plenty of fresh vegetables, especially green vegetables.
4. Use more rye or whole wheat bread instead of white bread.

These suggestions, the speaker explained, are made on the basis of recent experiments which have apparently shown such practices to be of distinct aid in promoting mouth health. He emphasized, however, that it is difficult to formulate hard and fast rules on such subjects, many long years of patient research being required before it is posssible—and even then, there are exceptions.

Experiments on Children

The experiments Dr. Cook described were conducted by the University of Michigan under a $5,000,000 research grant. The research was carried on at two orphanages.

One orphanage in Detroit was wealthy, heavily endowed, and was able to provide a staff versed in dietetics and other modern practices. What was considered a well-balanced diet was provided, and the 2,000 boys and girls were also given ample medical attention.

But tests showed that approximately 95 out of every 100 youths had "very poor" teeth.

The university also conducted experiments at another orphanage, this one in Ohio. It was a struggling institution supported on meager funds by a religious group, which did the best it could. But orange juice was seldom available, the children were given skimmed milk, and the diet generally was not one that would be considered adequate and well-balanced. As a matter of fact, most of the youngsters were underweight according to standard tests.

Sweets Eliminated

Without changing any of the other factors, the researchers permitted the children to have absolutely no candy. Then the sugar bowls were removed from the tables.

Ninety-five out of every 100 of

Charles Davis's Body Is Found Near His Home

Certificate of Suicide Is Issued by Dr. Linne H. Corson

The body of Charles Davis, 70, Howard street, Cresaptown, was found late yesterday morning in an unoccupied cottage near his home with a bullet wound through the heart.

Dr. Linne H. Corson, county deputy medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide and fixed the time of death as approximately 11 a. m.

The wound was made by a .44 calibre rifle bullet fired from a .410 calibre shotgun, according to Morgan C. Harris, state's attorney, who added that Mr. Davis had tried to commit suicide about a month ago by turning on the gas.

Missing her husband about 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, Mrs. Davis asked a neighbor, Perley Bodkin, 26, to search for the missing man. He was found dead at 11:30 o'clock in the living room of an unoccupied house across the street from his home.

Mr. Davis, apparently, had kneeled beside a sofa and pressing the shotgun against his chest, touched the trigger with a cane he was holding, according to Dr. Corson.

The house in which Mr. Davis was found was one that he rented but has been unoccupied for some time. He was in the habit of going there during the warm afternoons for a nap.

Sgt. Charles Magaha, Maryland state police, and Paul M. Fletcher, assistant state's attorney also assisted in the investigation.

Surviving besides his widow are the following stepchildren, Mrs. Laura Everly, Sherman Keel, Mrs. Pearl Bucy and Mrs. May Boor.

Divorce Granted, Three Suits Filed

Former Legislator Named Defendant in Action Brought by Wife

Three divorce cases were docketed yesterday in circuit court as one divorce decree was handed down.

Thomas L. Popp was named defendant in an action brought by Mrs. Mabel S. Popp. Details of the suit could not be learned, however, the papers having been removed from the files.

The bill of complaint was filed by William R. Carscaden, attorney, while an answer was docketed by Charles G. Watson, attorney, on behalf of Popp.

An absolute divorce is asked by Mrs. Catherine Twigg Hensel from Charles W. Hensel. The suit, filed by Edward J. Ryan, attorney, says the couple was wed in April, 1934, and separated two weeks ago. Custody of an infant daughter, payment of counsel fees and alimony and a restraining order to prevent Hensel from interfering with his wife in any way are asked.

Desertion and other grounds are alleged by Charles Lee Earsom in a petition for an absolute divorce from Mrs. Mary Ellen Warnick Earsom. The couple was wed October 1, 1936, according to the bill of complaint, docketed by Morris Baron, attorney.

Associate Judge William A. Huster, meanwhile, signed a decree granting Mrs. Myra Philson Floto, of 58 Greene street, an absolute divorce from Harry Floto.

The couple, wed in April, 1909, voluntarily separated in August, 1933, according to the testimony. Mrs. Floto, 51, declared that they agreed to part when they found they "just could not get along together."

The plaintiff was represented by Morris Baron, attorney. Floto did not contest the suit.

Denying charges made by his wife, Mrs. Ruth R. Rhodes, Roy E. Rhodes filed an answer to her divorce suit through Julius E. Schindler, attorney.

Conciliators Mum After Conference In Celanese Case

No Announcement as to Progress Made after First Joint Meeting

What progress, if any, has been made in contract negotiations between Local 1874 of the Textile Workers Union of America and the Celanese Corporation was not known last night.

Labor department conciliation officials met yesterday in Washington with union and company officials in an effort to reach an agreement on demands of the CIO union for wage increases and a union shop, but no announcement was forthcoming as the conference adjourned last night, presumably to meet again today, according to the Associated Press.

Yesterday's session was the first joint meeting with company and union representatives. Previously, labor conciliators had met separately with representatives of both sides.

Representing the company were Matthew H. O'Brien, of New York, attorney for the company; Fred T. Small, plant manager; and Edward R. Allan, personal director.

Union representatives included Herbert Payne, of New York, TWUA vice-president; George A. Meyers, Clyde D. Lucas, Albert A. Albright, Jacob M. Lewis Jr., Lester H. Jay, William B. Coleman and Robert Thwaites Jr., all of Cumberland; Earl Snyder, of Mt. Savage; and Naomi Sheetz, of Keyser, W. Va.

Labor conciliation officials participating were James J. Spillane, John Jennings and Paul W. Fuller.

Peskin's To Open Ready-to-Wear Salon Today

5,000 Feet of Floor Space also includes Children's Shoe Department

A spacious fashion salon with the airy distinctiveness of a modern sunlit palace will greet those who visit the remodeled and redecorated second floor of Peskin's Shoe Store, 145 Baltimore street, which will be formally opened today as a ladies' ready-to-wear and children's shoe department.

Employes of the George F. Hazelwood Company, local contractor, were busily engaged until a late hour last night putting on the finishing touches for the grand opening event.

Morton W. Peskin, manager, stated that the new ready-to-wear department will carry a full line of juniors, misses and women's wearing apparel in addition to a full line of half sizes. One of the highlights of the accessory department will be an unusual circular sweater bar.

Five thousand feet of floor space on the second floor also will include an enlarged children's shoe department, and X-ray fitting service, which was moved from the first floor, and an Adorable and Arch Setter department, which will contain stylish footwear for women at moderate prices.

The entire second floor is finished in pearl gray with jade green carpet and portiers. The chairs are coral, gold and green, which is indeed a striking color combination.

Twenty-five large fluoresent lights adorn the ceiling and the new department is completely air-conditioned. Spacious fitting rooms and partially concealed stock cases are added features to this most attractive ready-to-wear salon.

Mrs. Mae Leeder, who has been associated with ready-to-wear establishments throughout the country, will be in charge, and Mrs. Edith Beachy will be head fitter.

A new passenger elevator to the second floor will be in operation today.

James Eppenstein, Chicago architect, who designed the first floor, also arranged the new department. Plumbing and heating units were installed by Clyde W. Love and the painting is by Joseph E. Dennison, local contractor.
